Fight Opens to Keep Riley, Leslie Foe, Off Ballot

THIEF SLASHES, SHOOTS AT WOMAN

KNIFE SCARS NORTH SIDE VICTIM'S FACE

Prowler Drags Young Mother From Bed in Rage Over Attempt to Conceal $1.37

Dragged from her bed by a prowler who demanded her money, Mrs. Ethel Saygidia, 23, of 1533 Forsythe street, North Side, was slashed on the face and wrists with a penknife when her assailant became enraged with her evasive answer today. The woman was dragged to the first floor of her home to find her purse containing $1.37, which she turned over to the thug. The man fled after firing a revolver at her.

DEMANDS MONEY

The woman was asleep in her bedroom when awakened by the prowler. Two small children were sleeping in the next room.

"Where's your money?" he demanded.

"I have none," the woman replied.

"Don't kid me," the robber said. "I know all the money that Tom makes." Tom Saygidia is the woman's husband.

The thug without warning dragged her from the bed and slashed her three times on each cheek and then on the wrists. During the struggle she informed him he purse was downstairs in the living room. He dragged her to the first floor and obtained the purse.

NEIGHBORS AROUSED

While the man was extracting the money, Mrs. Saygidia turned to run upstairs. As she did the thug fired a shot at her and then fled through the front door to the street. Neighbors who had been aroused by the woman's screams called police and removed her to St. John's Hospital, where her injuries were treated.

Mrs. Saygidia was extremely nervous when she returned home from the hospital and she was unable to give police a good description of the man other than he was a stranger to her. Police were unable to discover where the bullet which the thug had fired at the woman had imbedded itself. The woman's husband was absent at the time of the attack.

LESLIE FOE'S PETITIONS ATTACKED

Legal Action in Prospect To Keep Riley's Name Off Ballot in Senate Race

Local investigators were expected to decide today whether legal action would be taken to keep P. F. Riley's name from appearing on the primary ballot as a candidate for state senator from the Thirty-eighth district, according to word from Harrisburg.

Senator M. G. Leslie, incumbent, is opposed for re-election by Riley and Joseph G. Armstrong, Jr., both of whom vote in the Seventeenth ward.

Word from the State Bureau of Elections in Harrisburg reported yesterday that photostatic copies of Riley's petitions had been examined for suspected irregularities in signatures. The identity of the investigators was not disclosed.

COURT ACTION POSSIBLE

In the event improper signatures were found in numbers that would reduce the petitioners below the legal requirement, the Dauphin County Court would be asked to restrain the state from printing Riley's name on the ballot.

Interest in the Leslie-Armstrong-Riley contest is increased by the fact that one of Leslie's opponents is the son of County Commissioner Armstrong, Leslie's political partner for 25 years.

WITHDRAWALS SEEN

Another interesting local fight involves Congressman P. J. Sullivan, P. J. O'Malley, of the state auditor general's office, and former Congressman J. M. Morin.

Monday is the last day on which candidates may withdraw and despite denials by principals or their friends, many observers predicted eliminations that would permit more definite battle lines than are possible in a three-cornered race.

SHORT ROUTE RAIL PLAN BLOCKED

Examiner's Report to I. C. C. Vetoes $200,000,000 Project as Unnecessary

WASHINGTON, April 5. (AP.)—Plans of L. F. Loree, veteran president of the Delaware and Hudson Company, to construct a new line across Pennsylvania under the name of the New York, Pittsburgh and Chicago Railroad, would be rejected under recommendations submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission today by one of its examiners.

C. V. Burnside, assistant finance director of the commission, held that public convenience did not necessitate construction of the new 344-mile road across Pennsylvania which would have been in direct competition with existing routes between New York and Chicago and would have shortened the distance between New York and Pittsburgh by approximately 74 miles.

The New York Central, the Pennsylvania and the Baltimore and Ohio all opposed the proposed route, which would have cost $200,000,000, on the grounds that it would take traffic from them and would develop no new traffic along its route.

Plans of the Baltimore and Ohio for opening a shorter route between Pittsburgh and New York through acquisition of the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh and the Buffalo and Susquehanna were involved in the hearings on the proposed Loree route, the New York, Pittsburgh and Chicago opposing the Baltimore and Ohio's road while the latter company was opposing its route.

LAUNDRY LABEL CLUE TO VICTIM

A laundry label on the newly recovered shirt believed to be that of the murdered man found decapitated in a barrel in the woods of Penn Township today offered the best clue to his identification.

This label bore the name of J. G. Gregg, which may be the victim's name.

The label of the laundry itself also was on the blood-stained shirt, and through this county detectives hope to trace the victim.

FOUND BY BOYS

The shirt, along with the man's other clothes, was found in the woods off Verona road today by two boys. It was not established

FLIER SPEEDING EAST IN RACE

KANSAS CITY, April 5.—(AP.)—A 24-year-old airplane designer, Albert W. (Al) Mooney, flying a small low-wing monoplane of his own manufacture, today was believed headed East toward New York, well on his way toward establishing of a transcontinental flight record for light planes.

Mooney, who took off secretly from Los Angeles at 6:43 a. m., Pacific Coast Time, yesterday, was reported over Kansas City at 2:05 a. m.

BELLEFONTE, Pa., April 5.—(INS.)—A. W. Mooney, attempting a transcontinental non-stop flight from Los Angeles to New York, should have passed over Bellefonte and Pennsylvania's "hell stretch" between 5 and 6 o'clock this morning, according to airport officials here today.

"If Mooney flew the air mail route, we failed to see or hear his plane this morning," officials said.

The singer said the contract called for a start on production of the first picture by February 15 but no action had been taken. She said the contract provided she was to receive $75,000 from the first picture, $90,000 from the second, $100,000 from the third and $125,000 from the fourth.

She said a telegram informing her of the will arrived yesterday. Lizak died yesterday, she said.

'WAIT FOR DATA' DELAYS HALL

Although years of study have been devoted to the project, the County Commissioners are not yet ready to proceed with the building of the Town Hall, Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong contends. They need additional engineering advice, he said.

Armstrong promised that something—he did not say what—would be done "in a month or two." He hinted that the cost of the auditorium might be prohibitive.

Citizens of Allegheny County, by a vote of 66,823 to 38,533, authorized issuance of $6,000,000 bonds for the auditorium in a special election June 26, 1928. The next day Armstrong, in a formal statement, spoke of the "verdict" as imposing on the commissioners "obligations" to the citizens which Desert and Ocean.

Two Little Texas Girls.
If Adam Could See This.
Chinese Worm Turns.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., April 5.

THIS is written in the office of the Santa Barbara Morning Press, owned and well run by R. G. Fernald and leading its competitor in circulation, which has increased 40 per cent since G. A. Martin became managing editor, five years ago.

Santa Barbara, almost too beautiful to be real, is about half way on today's automobile journey from the Mojave Desert, back of the mountains on the highland, to San Simeon, at the ocean's edge north, half way to San Francisco.

THIS is a land of long distances. Today's run of 300 miles is an average trip. Presently, when the new highway is built from Seattle, along the Pacific, through Washington, Oregon, California, Mexico and on down to Panama, you will be able to take a long ride out here.

About one thousand miles, in a straight line, on perfect roads, is all you can do at present.

CROSSING the desert, east of the mountains going north, to the pass leading to Ventura, you see many abandoned ranches, where men have learned that fighting the desert is hard always, and without abundant water, hopeless.

ROOFS have fallen in, windows gone, fences down, sage brush, grease wood and cactus creeping back over land once cleared. Lizards, jack rabbits, huge desert turtles and coyotes again taking possession. Each abandoned ranch tells of years of hard, wasted work, and hope at last abandoned.

THE unemployment problem is visible, even on desert roads. Men seeking work, walk wearily, the young men carrying nothing. The older men, familiar with a hard life, carry heavy bundles, often as big as the man, bedding, extra shoes, clothes, etc. Their lot is made harder by the wave of crime, which makes automobile drivers afraid to carry their less fortunate fellow men. Stories on good-natured drivers, robbed, or shot and robbed as a result of "giving a lift" cause the majority to harden their hearts and drive on.

AMONG desert-traveling cars, passed on a fast drive, is one of small, well-known make, almost as old as the two 16-year-old girls in it. The license plate says Texas. Strong independent faces those girls have, the driver lifts her thin left arm in friendly salute, as you pass.

THEY do not follow the mountain line north, but go straight on to the Cajon Pass, headed for Hollywood. They dream that they will soon be asking Novarro, Barrymore, Gilbert or some handsome entity "wherefore art thou Romeo." But, sad reality, they will be asking themselves, "wherefore didst thou leave Texas."

FOR awhile they will learn about life, working in some hospitable Los Angeles cafeteria. Then two Texas boys, very unlike Novarro, Barrymore or Gilbert, will come after them, and they will live happily ever after, with many little Texas babies, and a happier career than movies can offer.

THEY are quite safe, in their rattling car, on the desert. Each has her little "gun," and each would bore holes in any over-demonstrative person, with a nonchalance that would make Mr. Murad seem all excited.

YOU drive about 100 miles, a cool wind blowing over snow-covered mountains on your left, then suddenly the mountains open, and a wide valley leads down to Venturea and the ocean.

In that valley are hedges of roses in bloom, thirty feet high, miles of walnut trees and orange groves, and far up on the hillsides, hundreds of oil wells, spouting out wealth, thousands of dollars a day, from individual wells.

THE power that said—see Genesis—"let us make man in our own image," evidently decided in that same week of creation to prepare a surprise for man out here. Little did Adam dream, looking ruefully back at the flaming sword before the garden gate, that his descendants would find here gardens so much fairer.

SPEAKING of biblical stories, what do you think of the Chinese forbidding the showing of Ben Hur, because "it is pure propaganda encouraging belief in baseless superstitions," the superstitions referred to, being the teachings of Christianity? Coming from believers in Shintoism, that seems a little hard. From a Confucian agnostic in all things, and intellectually dignified, you would resent it less violently.

Really, it hardly seems worth while to spend good missionary money saving souls with so little appreciation.

The Tu Quoque is never very effective, but consider some superstitions that our good missionaries have to combat. Mr and Mrs Johnson, traveling with moving picture cameras around the world, bring this from the Far East.

In Polynesia, the marriageable young women parade before priests of the devil-devil gods, the latter having been

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP.)—Comes Charles S. Peterson, city treasurer of Chicago to point out that, far from being No. 1 when it comes to murders, Chicago is No. 18; Washington, D. C., has more murders per capita than Chicago, Peterson spoke at a luncheon at the Harvard Club.

King Boris Chided As Engineer for Delaying Train

SOFIA, Bulgaria, April 5.—(AP.)—The Plevna express arrived at that city several minutes late today, and the engineer was subjected to a severe reprimand from the station chief.

Voracious Rapidan Trout Leap to Hoover Bait

By GEORGE E. DURNO,
International News Service.

HOOVER CAMP, Rapidan River, Va., April 5.—A royal coachman slithered out over the surface of the Rapidan this morning, and the 1930 presidential trout fishing season formally was inaugurated. For the benefit of the uninitiated, a "royal coachman" is a species of artificial fly designed to make a brook trout think one of the insects which hover over a blue mountain stream of an April days is a morning aperetif. It was the type of fly attached to President Hoover's tackle today when he invaded the headquarters of his own private creek soon after an early breakfast and made his first serious try of the season, just opened, for brook trout.

Mr. Hoover's first week-end of the spring at his Rapidan camp is a stag affair. Later the ladies will be present, but this week-end was voted sacred to the fishermen.

LOBBY WAR ON HUSTON AND RASKOB WORRIES LEADERS

Under Fire for Activities To Swing Shoals Deal; Democrat Rum Fund Hit

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON.
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Enjoying a mere lull before the storm, rival party leaders in the Senate were frankly concerned today over an impending political war involving the heads of both major national committees.

A drive to remove Claudius H Huston as Republican National Committee chairman probably will get under way next week when the Senate Lobby Committee files a report on his Muscle Shoals lobbying activities. At the same time, Senator Robinson (Rep.), of Indiana, member of the lobby committee, will try to link John J Raskob, Democratic national chairman, a little closer to the affairs of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

SCAN USE OF MONEY

The Huston case will provide the more sensational developments.

The lobby report undoubtedly will go into all of the details of Huston's activities as president of the Tennessee River Improvement Association, an organization that frankly lobbied for private operation of the Muscle Shoals project. It will deal, too, with a certain $36,100 fund given Huston for lobbying purposes but used by him on a speculative account with a New York stock broker.

The Raskob case may fail to achieve any such prominence. The only interesting development probably will be detailed information on how the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment used Raskob's annual contributions to elect both Republican and Democratic anti-drys to Congress.

Raskob frankly told the Lobby Committee he averaged $30,000 a year since 1928 in contributions to the anti-dry cause. In all, he said, he had given $65,000 to the anti-dry association.

ASK DANIELS' VIEW

Josephus Daniels, who was secretary of the Navy in Wilson's cabinet, has been invited to appear before the committee Tuesday to explain an attack he made on Raskob's anti-dry contributions. Daniels, an ardent dry who banished rum from the American Navy, published an editorial in his Raleigh, N. C., newspaper, denouncing Raskob's financial aid to anti-dry Republicans. Later on, officials of the anti-dry association will be called to tell how much they spent in behalf of anti-dry Republicans and how much of Raskob's money went to this task.

CLARK IN COURT TO STUDY CRIME

Director of Public Safety James M. Clark sat with Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Morals Court today. The Director's purpose, he said, was to get first-hand information on crime conditions in the city through the testimony at the Morals Court hearings.

"I would like to find out how these young people start on their careers of crime," Clark said.

Statistics show that 85 per cent of the cases in Morals Court result from the drinking of moonshine liquor. Clark said that from the testimony of the defendants arraigned he would probably get a good insight into the present conditions in Pittsburgh. It was the first time since he became Director of Public Safety that he attended a Morals Court hearing.

HOOVER LOOKS FOR SURPLUS

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP.)—President Hoover is looking forward to a slender surplus at the close of this and the next fiscal year if the most rigid economy is exercised meanwhile by both the legislative and executive branches of the government.

His estimate is based upon income tax collections for March which, he says, "indicate that the unfavorable developments of last fall did not affect individual incomes to the extent that many had feared." The year's receipts from this source are now expected to be somewhat less than last year, but substantially greater than in 1928.

At the current rate of expenditure, the President said in a statement issued for publication today, "it appears that we should be able to close the fiscal year ending June 30, with a very moderate surplus."

The same holds true for next year, he continued, but there the situation is clouded by the fact that a surplus originally estimated at $47,000,000 has already been reduced by $30,000,000 through congressional appropriations.

WILLS $200,000 TO FAMILY

Mrs. Jennie E. Kennedy, of 5400 Forbes street, in her will filed for probate today, leaves a $200,000 estate to her husband and four children. The will stipulates that the estate be held in trust for five years before being distributed. One-fifth of the estate goes to the husband, Julian Kennedy, and four-fifths to the following children: Mrs. John O. Miller, Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, Joseph Kennedy and Julian Kennedy, Jr. The husband and children are named as trustees.

The will of Mrs. Wilhelmina Michalofski, of Carnegie, leaves a $23,500 estate to her family. A son, George C. Michalofski, receives $2,000, and two granddaughters, Marie Bildstein and Margaret Wendt, other bequests.

Mrs. Mary Lorilla Phillips, of 961 Deely street, leaves $10,000 to her husband, John Perry Phillips, and a son, Samuel M. Phillips.

Injured by Auto, Win $3,659 Verdict

Miss Helen Donley, Paulowna street, won a verdict of $3,659 for an injury to her left leg, as a result of being knocked down by a car owned by District Attorney Victor Bouton of Westmoreland county. The accident happened April 1, 1928, while she was crossing Bigelow boulevard at Thirty-second street. Her counsel was Thomas M. Marshall, III., the case being tried by Judge James H Gray.

violently serenaded for a week in advance to get their attention.

LIGHTLY clad, the young ladies are smeared with cocoanut oil, and as they pass a devil-devil priest scrapes off a little oil from each girl's back. The oil is analyzed in the devil-devil god's sanctum, and the priest tells the young woman she may marry now, or must wait a year.

Among those heathen, to question the accuracy of that backscraping method is as serious an offense as it is to doubt Jonah's trip, among good American fundamentalists.

SAVINGS GROW ENORMOUSLY

NEW YORK, April 5.—(Universal.)—Frugal New Yorkers are giving savings bank clerks the proverbial "bum's rush." And this despite the much-talked-of period of depression.

This became evident when the officials of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank announced more than 10,000 new accounts have been opened with the institution since the first of the year, swelling its total assets more than $14,000,000.

CONVICT KILLED FLEEING PRISON

OSSINING, N. Y., April 5.—(AP.)—A stream of machine gun bullets cut short the attempted escape of a Sing Sing convict after he had scaled two walls and plunged into the Hudson River last night. His body was recovered 15 minutes later with a bullet wound in the neck.

The recreation period had ended and the prisoners were falling in to be marched to their cells for the night, when Alphonse Tarrello, 24, serving a term for robbery, broke from the line and dashed across the yard.

With bullets spattering all about him he plunged into the river and swam a short distance before he sank.

He had been serving a sentence of seven and one-half to 15 years for robbery.

APPROVES JAIL ANNEX PLANS

Judge Harry H. Rowand today approved the plans for a $200,000 annex to the county jail which is to be built not alongside the jail, but adjoining the workhouse at Parkview.

The county commissioners, who had appropriated the money, are now expected to advertise for bids.

This annex, with 208 cells, will be used for prisoners who have been sentenced. The downtown jail then will house prisoners awaiting trial.

AWAIT MELLON DECISION ON GRUNDY

Former Chairman's Return Monday May Clear Up Confusion; Fisher in Line

W. L. Mellon, expected to return to Pittsburgh Monday, may settle the question of an indorsement of Joseph R. Grundy for the Senate and how far the Mellon influence will be extended.

Gov. Fisher's indorsement of Senator Grundy's candidacy to succeed himself was seen in political circles when Frank J. Gorman, the Governor's secretary, arrived in Philadelphia yesterday and took charge of Grundy's headquarters.

FISHER FOR GRAFF

It is understood that Fisher's chief interest in the campaign will be to aid Grundy and Judge J. Frank Graff, who was appointed by the Governor to the Superior Court bench and who is a candidate for one of the two nominations for that court.

Supporters of the Davis-Brown ticket have slated Judge James B. Drew, of Pittsburgh, and Judge W. P. Linn, of Philadelphia, incumbent, for the two Superior Court seats.

The location of Grundy headquarters in Pittsburgh will be announced today, according to S. C. Jamison, local representative of Grundy's Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association.

DAVIS STANDS PAT

State Senator James J. Coyne, Republican city chairman, has declared for Grundy, and the latter's friends are hopeful of a favorable announcement by State Senator Frank J. Harris.

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, declared in Washington yesterday "There is no change in my status" in replying to renewed rumors that he would resign from President Hoover's cabinet to continue his campaign for United States Senator in opposition to Grundy.

Yesterday's reports were to the effect that Davis and his gubernatorial running mate, Francis Shunk Brown, had reached an impasse over the prohibition issue in a conference on a campaign platform.

"I have never discussed prohibition as a campaign issue," Davis said.

Commissioner Armstrong continued yesterday the organizing of his western forces who are supporting the Davis-Brown ticket. Armstrong has obtained headquarters space in the William Penn Hotel and is expected to lease a section of the Mellon controlled Hotel Henry that was formerly used as campaign headquarters for the Republican organization.

County Commissioner C. C. McGovern, western Pennsylvania director of Gov. Pinchot's campaign for another term, conferred with leaders yesterday on arrangements for Pinchot's four-day visit here beginning next Wednesday.

Mayor Kline conferred yesterday in his office with administration forces and indorsed State Senator W. D. Mansfield to succeed himself from the Forty-fourth District.

CANDIDATES INDORSED

Indorsements also were given to Max J. Spann, as candidate for the Legislature from the Fifth District, and E. B. Goehring from the Fourth District, it was reported.

John Freyvogel and Sadie Snowball were indorsed as candidates for the state committee from the Forty-fourth District in opposition to the incumbents, County Recorder S. D. Foster and Helen R. Douglas.

Freyvogel was erroneously reported from Harrisburg early in the week as an opponent of Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell. The latter represents the state committee from the Forty-third District and has no opposition.

'WAIT FOR DATA' DELAYS HALL

COMMISSIONERS INACTIVE

After sifting, with the assistance of Norman F. Brown, county director of public works, the merits of scores of proposed locations, the County Planning Commission, on December 27 last, recommended a site. But the commissioners have since done nothing, although many civic and trade groups, as well as numerous individual citizens, have called upon them to act or explain their failure to do so.

"Have the commissioners abandoned the Town Hall project?" Armstrong was asked.

"What gave you that idea?" he inquired, sharply.

"Your delay, your silence, and some talk to the effect that a satisfactory auditorium could not be built for $6,000,000."

"Well, if we wanted to put up one like that at Atlantic City, which I went through recently, $6,000,000 wouldn't put the paint on it.

'WILL DO SOMETHING'

"The trouble about the Town Hall," Armstrong continued, "is that everybody that owns a lot wants to sell it to us, and 99 out of 100 are not suitable."

"Well, apart from the question of site, is it your opinion that the hall would cost more than you will be able to spend?"

"I don't say that. But we want more engineering advice before we proceed.

"In a month or so Mr. Babcock and I and the other commissioner will hold a meeting and do something. In the meanwhile, it is a closed incident."

So saying, the commissioner pressed a buzzer to indicate the interview was ended.

BABCOCK "CAN EXPLAIN"

"Have the Commissioners abandoned the Town Hall project?" Commissioner E. V. Babcock was asked.

"No."

"When can action be expected?"

"I don't know."

"What is the cause of the delay?"

"Many things."

"Is it a question of site, or a question of cost?"

"The situation is complicated, and cannot be explained except in an extended interview, which I do not have time for now."

"When will you have time? Later in the day?"

"No, I will be too busy."

"Tomorrow?"

"Call me up, and I'll see."

LAUNDRY LABEL CLUE TO VICTIM

definitely that these were the victim's clothes but Chief George W. Murren, of the county detectives, was convinced they were.

The shirt, collar and undergarment were blood-stained. The sleeves of a blue sweater were ripped, the tied laces of the oxford shoes indicated the shoes had been jerked off hurriedly and a burlap sack found alongside the clothes matched those found in the cabbage barrel last Tuesday.

Murren pointed out that the shoes, the collar and the socks all fit the body of the victim.

CLOTHES MILE AWAY

James Mason and his stepbrother, Edmond Schenck, 4, were digging up dirt for a flower garden when they discovered the clothes, within a mile of where the barrel had been found.

The discovery followed the tracing of the barrel to a warehouse in the Strip produce yards. This clue is especially important, for detectives have felt that the killing was in reprisal for the slaying of Sam Monastero, who was in the produce business.

FRANCE DELAYS PARLEY BREAK

By HARRY R. FLORY
International News Service.

LONDON, April 5.—The expected withdrawal of France and Italy from the London naval conference was postponed for a few days today.

Foreign Minister Aristide Briand of France left for Paris this afternoon to consult with Premier Andre Tardieu. He announced he would return on Tuesday for one last fling at clearing away the obstacles preventing formulation of a five-power treaty.

Decision to give the conference another few days' lease on life as a five-power body was reached by M. Briand, Premier MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson at a long meeting at St. James's palace this morning. They agreed to devote a few days more to political negotiations in the faint hope of agreement.

Unless success rewards their efforts by the end of next week, negotiations for a five-power London treaty will be definitely abandoned.

It was learned today that the Italian delegates, headed by Foreign Minister Dino Grandi, hope to return to Rome on April 13 whatever the status of the conference.

'OTHER MAN' KIDNAPED, TORTURED

Aviator Blames Husband In Attack to Force News Of Wife's Whereabouts

By DOROTHY ROE.
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, April 5.—The course of true love never did run smooth.

So said James Quinn, young aviation mechanic, who told a tale of kidnaping, torture and mystery in a New York court today, to which he submitted for hours rather than reveal the whereabouts of Mrs. Philomena Cecilia Corbett, young wife of J Morgan Corbett, wealthy and socially prominent realtor, of Boston.

Three men were held on charges of kidnaping Quinn and subjecting him to a night of torture in a lonely cottage at Edgewater Camp, Mass. The men are Arthur Hamel, of Haven Hill, Mass.; Edward Kendal, of North Reading, Mass., both aviators in the employ of Corbett, and Edward Kline, a salesman, who also was once in Corbett's employ.

LURED TO COTTAGE

Young Quinn was named by Corbett as co-respondent in a divorce suit filed last November in East Cambridge, Mass., against his young wife, whose disappearance precipitated the melodrama which was aired in court today.

Quinn told police he was lured to a cottage at Edgewater Camp on promise of a job as mechanic for a plane. The plane, police seek to prove, was hired for $500 by Corbett as a decoy.

Wednesday evening, according to the story detectives say Quinn told them, Corbett himself and an unidentified woman appeared at the cottage with Kline. Kendal and Hamel were already on the scene.

The young aviation mechanic was overpowered and tied to a bed.

TORTURED FOR HOURS

There followed long hours of torture, he said, during which the woman slapped and scratched his face and the men beat him and twisted his arms in an effort to make him tell the whereabouts of Mrs. Corbett. At 3 o'clock Thursday morning, Quinn finally gave them the information they sought, and they left him.

He escaped later while his two guards, Kendal and Kline, were telephoning. When he appeared in court he was suffering from a broken nose, his face and hands were cut, and his eyes blackened.

GANDHI READY TO FLOUT LAW

BOMBAY, India, April 5.—(AP.)—Mahatma Gandhi, Indian Nationalist leader, arrived today at Dandi, where tomorrow at 6 a. m. he intends to break the British salt laws and begin the campaign of civil disobedience which he hopes ultimately will bring his country's independence.

With him were those devotees their ranks depleted by smallpox, who on March 12 left Ahmadabad for the 165-mile march to the Jalalpur district.

The receding tide in the Gulf of Bombay at Dandi leaves pools of water in which, as they evaporate, remain deposits of salt. Gandhi and his followers will collect this salt. It apparently will be unfit for use with food, but the mere act of appropriation will constitute a breach of the law and fulfill his aim.

Oil Gusher Bursts Cap And Menaces Countryside

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 5.—(AP.)—Hurling aside man's puny mechanical contrivances, which for seven hours held the recalcitrant gusher, the Mary Sudik No. 1, under control, the well early today again resumed its wild rampage, flaunting a rumbling pillor of petroleum over the South Oklahoma City field.

The big well smashed out of control at 1:05 a. m. after a specially constructed master gate, known as an "overshot" began to leak.

These leaks widened rapidly, anchor bolts creaked and the whole structure began to give way. Fearing that the "overshot" would be ripped loose and sent smashing up through the 122-foot steel derrick, the few men who had been stationed to watch the well through the night, flung open the valves and the column of oil again spurted high over the crownblock, and spattered down over the already oil-soaked countryside.

The grim terror of the oil fields—fire—hovered even closer about the wild well today for, the workers pointed out, if the big cap should be blown off by the force of the gas and sent smashing into the top of the derrick, sparks from the impact might fire the hissing oil and gas.

YEHUDI MENUHIN, the prodigy of the violin, has invited Fred Lissfelt, the music critic, to visit the Menuhin place in Switzerland this summer, and Fred has said yes . . . Newspapermen at the opening night of "Strange Interlude" voted Mrs. Clark, wife of the public safety director, the most beautiful woman there . . . And Frank S. Germon is reputed to have sold more waffle irons than any other . . .

In that all-humon Cine-Symphony Orchestra there are 49 men and Gertrude Lenore Krepps, who is a panic on the harp . . . That was a very pretty etching ("Along the Monongahela") the Pennsylvania League of Women Voters published in its Bulletin, even if it did show the new Mt. Harry and Ann Build New House and Appear In Same Film

By DOROTHY HERZOG

(Copyright, 1930, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, April 5.

THE Harry Bannisters' (Ann Harding) home, when completed, will foundation atop one of Hollywood's highest hills. It will overlook four valleys and the ocean—on a clear day, with maybe a blur far at sea that will be Catalina. Seems that Mr. Bannister is keen for electrical contrivances. He has arranged a gadget whereby when a car enters the driveway, it presses something or other which in turn swings wide the garage doors and turns on the lights! Recently Ann and her husband took some friends up to look at the house. While there, quite a few unknown visitors strolled in. Mr. Bannister insisted his own party wait for him while he took the visitors around and explained this and that! Ann and Harry, incidentally, will appear together in "Girl of the Golden West."

Ann Harding.

WHAT—AGAIN?

NEVER a dull moment, now that Eddie Cantor has come to town to stay for at least that long. Eddie was strolling around the United Artists' lot.

"What's doing," he hailed a friend.

"Nothing much," indifferently, adding: "They're shooting Lincoln on Stage 5."

"What?" eyebrowed Eddie. "Again?"

KEEP BUSTER BUSY

SPEAKING of Miss Prevost reminds me apropos of nothing—William (Buster) Collier, Jr., unofficially reported to Marie, was the innocent victim of an amusing yarn that managed to reach the publik prints. Said yarn announced Buster engaged to Winnie Lightner.

"I'd like to meet Miss Lightner," remarked Collier. "A man should know his fiancee, you know."

He should. .

Buster has finished his role in the 1930 Fox Follies and treks to M. G. M. to appear in an added number for the "Old Timers' Revue."

They're keeping him busy, all right. Buster made 18 pictures last year. He hasn't idled thus far this season.

MARIE GOES HOME

MARIE PREVOST goes home tomorrow from the hospital, whence she went, a week or so ago, for an operation. Marie has certainly had her share of illness. Four or five ear operations is not too pleasant. Her ear trouble goes back sundry years, when she was a Mack Sennett bathing beauty and traipsed in comedy after comedy, making water scenes at any and all hours and sech. Marie, incidentally, has lost quite a bit of weight and is said to have dieted to slim proportions. She'll be flickering shortly. In a celluloider, I mean.

Coming Back

Hugh Banks is coming back to George Sharp's company for the presentation of "Charlie's Aunt" in the Pitt the week of April 14.

SWEET NANCY CARROLL PLAYS "HONEY" IN THE PENN

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Just to show they are not superstitious, we suppose, the managers of the Penn Theater have also taken Friday to start off the week, and yesterday they went Mohammedan for the first time. Nancy Carroll helped them over the hurdle in the calendar with a new singing and talking picture called "Honey." It could just as easily have been called "Sugar" or "Molasses," for Nancy would be just as sweet by any other name.

The picture is an old novel, "Come Out of the Kitchen," by Alice Duer Miller, turned into a comedy for Ruth Chatterton by A. E. Thomas, and now rolled out into a screen Saengerfest for Nancy & Co.

IT'S A TOOTHSOME MENU

Served with all sorts of song sauces, from Nancy's sentimental lyric about her Hope Chest to "Sing, You Sinners," at a Negro camp meeting, this "Honey" is pleasing to the palate. There are good people in it—Jobyna Howland as a stately and domineering materfamilias, and little Mitzi Green as a "cash-and-carry" pedler of information, are especially amusing.

The hero is played by Skeets Gallagher in bland and well-fed style, while Harry Green extracts fun from a private detective role by Zionist mannerisms.

Sticking to cook-book terminology, the comedy is overdone, the ballads are turning into glucose, but Chef Nancy looks good enough to eat, and the whole performance will aid digestion.

A VENETIAN CARNIVAL

The stage show presents a Venetian frolic with Ted Claire as the Ceremonial Doge, and a lot of Chester Hale girls dancing on the piazza. The most popular citizen on the Rialto turns out to be Peg-Leg Bates, whose dancing caused a great fluttering among the doves of St. Mark's.

Don Alfonso Zelaya, Janina Krolova, Kathryn Lewis, Neil O'Day and the Tommy Atkins Sextet helped to make the carnival memorable on the Grand Canal. Breeskin might have played Paganini, but Kreisler will do. It's not so far from Venice to Vienna.

More Business—More Employment!

You have lots of time to read on Sunday! That's why you'll enjoy a special illustrated article in tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph describing the new project for automobile production now well under way in the Pittsburgh area. A revival of this industry means the employment of hundreds of workers—an added link to the chain of bigger, better business movements for Pittsburgh.

With Walter Winchell On Broadway

NEW YORK, April 5.

EX-GIRL FRIEND

MOST neatly done, your giving me the gate!
I'm sorry that I seem to mind it so;
I meant to kiss you lightly, let you go.
(I always said that I'd co-operate),
But love I find unwilling to vacate
A stubborn heart—hence the fortissimo
Of tears and anguish, although welll know
You find me irksome and inadequate.
Still, I confess, I owe you thanks for this:
You never tossed me through a sunroom door,
You haven't blacked my orbs for emphasis,
Nor bounced me up and down upon the floor;
And while I must admit myself passe,
At least I travel whole upon my way.

—M. E. C. (Cleveland).

ONCE A HAM, ALWAYS?

MR. HEYWOOD BROUN has arranged for a benefit show on Saturday, April 12 (midnight), at the Imperial Theater. The benefit is for the local unemployed and Mr. Broun recruited us to appear "if only to introduce an act or two." As a matter of fact, Mr. Broun asked us to come and dance but we shuddered at the thought, because it has been 10 years since we "stole the second bow," and anyway, chorus girls have so improved that it would be futile to compete with them. And we do not hope to stop the show. We found out long ago that it was just as difficult to keep one going.

However, we are glad to help the Broun unemployment sitchee-ay-shun and we think our appearance will contribute greatly to the affair, for if only half the locals who don't like us pay to come in, it will be a success.

SPEAKING OF BENEFITS

THE Broun show plans remind us of the small-time act who had laid off for six months and could only get benefits to play. Every time a calamity happened or a person died leaving his kin in distress these small-timers were urged to do a benefit performance. During their six months of unemployment they must have appeared at three dozen benefits.

One day the feminine member of the act came home with a newspaper and showed her hoofer husband the screaming headines which read, "William Howard Taft Dead!"

"Good God!" ejaculated the hoofer, "another benefit?"

APPARENTLY

The reason, it is said, that so many actors and columnists theft the ideas, gags and routines of others is that if caught the only charge possible against them would be petty larceny.

THE PENALTY OF FAME

ADOLPH OCHS, the publisher of the New York Times, celebrated his seventy-first birthday recently. His nephew, Col. Julius Ochs Adler, called him up to offer his felicitations.

"Uncle," said the Colonel, "I'd like to help you celebrate your birthday in a novel manner. How would you like it if I brought over Amos and Andy?"

"Amos and Andy who?" answered Mr. Ochs.

And not getting any response, he hung up.

A FORM OF CRITICISM

Take it from Cholly Knickerbocker, the performances at the Metropolitan Opera House these days are as second-rate as the people in the boxes.

THE TOME OF TOMES

SOME of the outstanding points of superiority in the Funk and Wagnalls New Standard Dicksh (besides the inclusion of the word "Whoopee") follow: More than 380 specialists and editors, each an expert in his own particular branch of learning, were employed to help Managing Editor Vizetelly prepare it. More than 455,000 words are spelled, pronounced and defined. This vocabulary includes words of recent coinage, those that came into the language during the war, and the latest technical terms. Typical of these are: Black Bottom, columnist, gadjet, honeydew melon, vitamin, wise-crack, inteeligentsia, rodeo, television, soviet, radio-amplifier, plus-fours, thermion, bloc, daylight-saving, blurb, blimp, Bolsheviki, camouflage, Fascism, Sinn Fein and necking.

The next edition probably will include "Gazumper," which was coined by George Jean Nathan. A "gazumper" is a fiend who would rather "neck" than anything else.

THINGS THAT BURN ME UP AND KNOCK ME COLD

AMONG other tragedies of Broadway's literary treadmill is the one concerning a writer who is the personal sec'y to a movie magnate who has decided that a biography is good ballyhooey. The sec'y, an obscure chap, has been collecting data on his chief for six months, jotting down all the necessary info in his loose leaf volume. It is not in narrative form—just data.

But here's the gag. His labors are to be turned over to some writer with a reputation, who will get the huge chunk of dough, while the actual biographer might get as much as fired.

INCIDENTALLY

All the film genii rave about the flicker business as an industry, an art, a form of expression," and other aesthetic appellations. But the Radio Corporation officials and the Western Electric group have their own cold and heartless name for it, quite different from all the rest. Their term is "Electrical Entertainment."

L. J. Rubinstein, by the way, informs us that the filmoguls still seek a suitable word to replace "talkies." He suggests "Speaktures."

NEWSPAPERMAN STUFF

SOME of us were gathered in the managing editor's sanctum and newspaper romances were in order. Emile Gauvreau, the head man around here, advised his staff of "feature" writers not to take the animadversions or complaints of the readers too seriously. "Keep raising hell," he counselled, "and don't let people worry you. I once had to fire a nice little columnist up in Hartford who had colyumed for two years. But in all that time he never received a complaint or a compliment, so I assumed he wasn't being read."

ZEPPELIN RIDES OVER LONDON AGAIN IN ALDINE FILM

By MILDRED FILLMORE

It is the war again over in the Aldine—war in the clouds. The picture, a talkie, is "The Sky Hawk." Its melodramatic punch is a Zeppelin raid on London.

The production has its share of thrills and some effective moments. It goes in for contrast in building up to its dramatic climax. As the Zeppelin soars over London and drops booming bombs all around, a panorama of scenes are flashed before you. There is the caged hysteria in the prison and the peaceful calm in the church. There is reckless abandon in the theater and the worried concern in the orphanage.

All this, of course, is sandwiched in with a romantic story. This story has to do with a young British pilot, who is suspected of crashing his plane on purpose in an effort to keep out of the war. He is sent the traditional "white feather." But he doesn't go "suicide." Instead, he resolves that he'll show them. And he does.

Alone in a plane he soars high over the buildings and engages in battle with the raiding Zeppelin.

The picture makes a bid for realism. It has the crew of the Zeppelin talking in German.

The cast features John Garrick and Helen Chandler.

Englishman

John Loder has the role of a young Englishman in "Rich People," the current talkie in the Stanley.

ENRIGHT'S NEW SHOW PRESENTS DRAMA AND FARCE

By J. G. SHRADLE

In this entertainment span of combined stage ceremonies and screen production, balance in the program's ingredients of drama and farce is commonly overlooked. But the Enright Theater's newest offering is different.

"Lilies of the Field" provides drama with its heart throbs and happy ending for the screen. "Spring Follies," despite a pepless opening chorus number, whizzes through jazz, song dance and fun, to give the extreme composite on the stage.

Corrine Griffith has been starred in many appealing roles. Yet, here undoubtedly is one screen drama portrayal to leave an impression. In a story of flappers who seek bright days regardless the cost, the star is given excellent support from Ralph Forbes and John Loder. Striking sets of dazzling beauty and true to life scenes of wild parties are in the film.

Harry Rose jokes and announces as the master of ceremonies, leaving little for Jay Mills to offer. In Rose is found a different type of director, different from our usual local entertainers. Bordering somewhat on burlesque style, he moves the performance along snappily to introduce Billy Myers, the Andersons, Helen Tompson and The Three Gobs.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's question: The Soviet Government has before it a plan to improve conditions of life by eliminating present family kitchens and forbidding the inclusion of kitchens in new houses. Food would be supplied at community kitchens. What do you think of the plan?

B. M. Doty

BERT M. DOTY, North Side, purchasing clerk: "I hardly believe that I would be in favor of it. It would have a tendency to make home life less pleasant. It would eliminate entertaining, too, to a great extent."

Miss Ganley

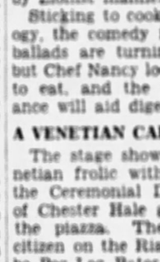
MARION GANLEY, Elliott, clerk: "I wouldn't like it. This idea of going half a mile to get your supper isn't so hot. Let the idea stay in Russia and not come over here to bother us."

Miss Glendon

MISS HARRIET GLENDON, Carnegie Tech, Home Economist: "It might be practicable for the Russians, but I hardly think it would work under our scheme of things. We had some experience with a similar plan during the war, in Evanston, Ill. Club women tried to show the economy and conservation possible, but I don't think they lasted much beyond the war. I don't think I would like to be forced to eat at some government restaurant, rather than my own home."

Miss Pottmeyer

ALICE POTTMEYER, Homewood, clerk: "Wouldn't that be rather hard on the men? Their homes would be broken up. It would be easier on the women, lighten their work. Different persons need different food, too."



Mrs. Johnston

MRS. RALPH W. JOHNSTON, Congress of Women's Clubs, executive: "Well, I think with the present regime in Russia, the plan might be all right. But it will hardly ever be popular in the U. S. A., I should think. Generally speaking, I feel it would be detrimental. Meals are about the only time we find the family together nowadays."

Miss Healy

CATHERINE HEALY, North Side, stenographer: "I don't believe in that. Look on a rainy day how you'd have to go out then. There would be a lot of of inconveniences, too. A lot of cooks and things would be out of work."

Will Rogers Says:

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., April 5.

AT a dinner one night at Ambassador Dawes', I told the Japanese delegate, "Admiral Takahari, I want to shake hands with you. I am going home and in a few months I want to tell everybody I shook hands with the winner."

Japan came to the conference demanding a higher rating, 10-10-7, instead of 10-10-6. She got it. They could have given it to her the first day and saved all this board bill. I have said all the time that if anything was done at London it would be on battleships and not on cruisers (the thing they went there to settle on).

You see England, on account of her dozens of coaling stations, don't need battleships, and neither does Japan, they want cruisers so they agree to limit something that they don't want, but we do.

Yours,

WILL.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Weddings of Interest in Baltimore

APRIL woke up in a warmer, sunnier mood this morning than she has for several days, and is beginning to take an interest in the world.

And no wonder she does, for today is a day of weddings. Yesterday there was a lovely ceremony here in Pittsburgh, and today there are two weddings taking place in Baltimore which concern Pittsburgh society.

First of all I want to tell you that Frances Jean Bakewell, daughter of Frances, who is the daughter of the D. Last Warren of Baltimore, and granddaughter of the late Mrs. Thomas Howard Baldwell, of Sewickley, and of Miami, Fla., will become the bride of Mr. Vernon Connolly, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Connolly, and Mrs. Connolly, of Deepcut, Surrey, England, this evening at 6:30 o'clock at the home of the Warfields in Woodbrook, Baltimore.

THE bride who will be given in marriage by her father will wear a gown of ecru lace and satin fashioned with a train falling from the left waist line and a veil of Brussels net and lace held in place by a cap of the bride's family. Her flowers will be mauve orchids. Because of the recent death of the bride-to-be's mother she will have no other attendant, her sister, Alice, who was maid of honor, will wear a blue chiffon gown, and a small blue lace hat, and who will carry mauve orchids.

Bridal Gown

The mother of the bride will wear lavender satin with a corsage of mauve orchids.

Hugh O'Connor of London and New York will be best man, and Charles Paxton, of Pasadena, an uncle of the bride. Thomas Bakewell, her brother, and Anthony Russell, of London, will be ushers.

THE home is decorated with spring flowers and roses for the wedding. A reception will follow the ceremony, and the bride and bridegroom will leave for New York at midnight and will sail Wednesday for England. Later they'll visit the continent.

Will Go Abroad

Relatives of the bride in Pittsburgh include the James Magees and their daughter, Frances Forsyth, the Donald Bakewells, Benjamin Bakewell and William M. Bakewell.

TODAY in Baltimore a very quiet wedding is taking place at 4:30 o'clock in the Govans Presbyterian Church. Anne Edith Chipman is the bride, and she is marrying Martyn K. Coster of Walnut street. She is attended by her sister, Blanche M. Chipman, of Baltimore. The bride is wearing a simple dark traveling suit with matching hat, and is carrying orchids. After the ceremony the Costers will leave for New York.

YESTERDAY afternoon one of the loveliest spring weddings of the season took place in St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal Church, when Mary Elizabeth Close, daughter of the Clifton Henry Closes of Beechwood boulevard, became the bride of Harrison Farnsworth Gleason, Jr., son of the Harrison Farnsworth Gleasons of Aylesboro avenue. The ceremony took place at 5:30 o'clock, and officiating was the Rev. Reginald Moody, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Robert Meade. The church looked lovely, decorated with palms and ferns and Easter lilies.

April Bride

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore eggshell satin and rose point lace and a veil of tulle was arranged in cap effect with rose point lace. She carried lilies.

HER sister, Katherine Close, was maid of honor and wore pink chiffon, and the matron of honor, Mrs. Harry Runnette, wore orchid chiffon. They both carried spring flowers. The bridesmaids, Margaret Cramer, of Cleveland, in blue chiffon, Margaret Jane Petty, in green chiffon, and the bride's cousin, Elizabeth Ganter Close, in peach chiffon, all carried boquets of Forsythia, delphinium and other spring flowers.

Bridal Party

John Sheedy was the best man. The ushers included the bridegroom's brother, Edward Gleason, Samuel Robb, Fayette Shepard, of New York, cousin of the bridegroom, Harry Halgmaier, Samuel B. Heppenstall and Alfred Diebold.

There was a reception in the University Club after the wedding, and receiving with the junior Gleasons were Mrs. Close, wearing aquamarine blue lace, and Mrs. Gleason also wearing lace, in rose color. The tables were centered with spring flowers and greens.

The junior Gleasons will live in North Euclid avenue after a fortnight spent in Bermuda.

The members will hold an Easter sale on Thursday and Friday, and it will take place in the Morewood avenue residence of Mrs. William Penn Snyder, Jr., from 10 o'clock that morning until 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The sale will include Easter novelties, summer apparel, handiwork, baked goods and candy.

The bride's uncle, the Rev. Dr. E. David Crawford, of Beechwoods, Pa., officiated.

Married At Mars

The bride wore a gown of white satin and a veil of white tulle in cap effect caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her matron of honor, Mrs. Lawrence Morrow, wore green chiffon and carried spring flowers. Her bridesmaid, Miss Bernice Bastar, sister of the bridegroom, wore pink lace and carried spring flowers. The best man was Russell Thoerner, of Pittsburgh, and Lawrence Morrow, of Valencia, was an usher. The wedding march was played by Miss Ruth Hespenheide, of Mars, and she wore pale blue chiffon.

After a wedding breakfast for 30 guests, Mr. and Mrs. Bastar left for a southern motor trip and will be at home in Lincoln avenue, Mars, after May 1.

Hail to Pitt

The Men's Glee Club of the University of Pittsburgh gave its annual home concert in Carnegie Music Hall last night. There was a very large audience of students and friends of Pitt, and they gave the singers well-earned applause.

J. Fred Lissfelt

One glance at the program will prove how the quality of music in the club has advanced. It was indeed a great day for music in America when college glee clubs began to sing motets and chorales of classic writers and fell away from the banal monotony of the old comic glees. There was a spirit in the old singing that should not be lost in the newer and better field, and Pitt's club is now in such danger. The entire tempo of the early part of the concert was slow, perhaps the fault of the grouping of songs, for later the singing became brighter. But one most praiseworthy feature is the finer nuances which Director Wright has been able to teach his men. The discipline of the chorus on the stage is excellent.

The piano playing of youthful Jessie Eloise Petty was a genuine surprise, for she has the poise of an adult artist. A quartet of Messrs. Adamson, Holland, Greiner and Sober, and a piona solo by John St. Peter, also the bagpipe playing of Andrew Havens, were pleasant interpolations.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

Dr. Heinroth Will Give Fifth Lecture

Dr. Charles Heinroth will deliver the fifth of a series of six lectures on music tonight in Carnegie Music Hall instead of presenting his usual recital program. The lectures take place of the recitals during the Lenten season. The subject tonight will be "The Significance of the Variation Form."

"Girl Unafraid"

One of the most interesting, most thrilling love stories ever announced for the Sun-Telegraph starts next Wednesday—"Girl Unafraid," by Gladys Johnson—a story of the modern girl and her fight for the man she loves. Don't miss the first big, exciting installment in next Wednesday's Sun-Telegraph. You had better order your dealer to save you the Wednesday issue so that you will not be disappointed.

DESIGNERS INTRODUCE THE NEWEST MILLINERY MODE

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, April 5.—Shading the eyes versus baring the face is the question that heads the millinery discussion at present. It is generally conceded among fashion authorities here, however, that this is a problem for the individual to ponder and settle. Designers are offering such a variety of brimmed and off-the-face models that there should be no reason for the selection to be a trying matter. Among the latest innovations is the introduction of the sailor hat, 1930 diversification of which are, the little kick-up to the brim over one eye, as found in the bandeau cloche, and the cartwheel brim expressed in novelty straws, linen and sundry other fabrics. Then of course there are the models of Directoire inspiration and the late interpretation of the mushroom brim, with the front quite narrow and the sides drooping down over the cheeks. Of importance among the bare-face models is the fabric hat of taffeta, ribbon, or costume fabric, as well as the innumerable softly woven straws. That the lingerie touch has reached the head is seen by the bits of pink and white cotton pique that is being used for facings, bows and tailored hats, especially on the shiny straws.

THE other model is of shiny black straw, a close fitting toque, with a veil-like cloche brim of black crin, or horse-hair as it is called in English. This veils the eyes in a most alluring and flattering manner. The hat is worn well back from the forehead. Two little tabs of straw are placed on the brim over each ear.

—Fine Cotton Goods Aisle—

for the EASTER PROMENADE

Undoubtedly the shoe is the foundation of the completed ensemble. Correctness in the whole must begin with correct footwear. For the Easter Promenade, formal daytime wear demands formal footwear. The matching colors necessitated by the costume, of course, set the scheme for the shoe. Satins and shantung silks are excellent, tinted to the desired color. Whites are exceedingly good this year for general wear, and in the leathers, reptile leads the field, with kid and contrasting kid also very popular.

The man must be shod as meticulously this year as in the past. The patent leather for formal daytime wear his rather lost its vogue, although it is still considered a correct adjunct to the cutaway. Light-soled shoes, oxfords naturally, are in popular fancy for the late spring and summer wear. Black shoes are de rigeur after six o'clock. Brown and tan oxfords are good for afternoon and morning wear only when they match the color scheme of the wearer's costume.

'Public Improvements Promote Progress'

Convinced that public improvements exert an important influence upon the progress of any community, the Board of County Commissioners of Allegheny County, on January 1, 1924, initiated a program of major public works, many of which are already effectively serving the citizens, while others of vital importance are being rapidly brought to completion.

During the year of 1929, twenty-one road projects, totaling in length 26.27 miles and costing approximately $2,059,841, were completed or placed under construction . . . 50.19 miles of 18-foot roadway were widened and resurfaced with asphaltic concrete, and, in addition, 51.5 miles of roads were surface treated by filling in all cracks and crevices with hot liquid tar and spreading chips over entire surface, thereby increasing the life of the asphaltic concrete pavement.

STEEL OUTPUT IN QUARTER LARGE

Maintenance of Present Schedules Would Bear Out Farrell's Forecast

By B. E. V. LUTY

Steel production has been at a rate under the average in the two biggest years the steel industry has had, and above the rate in all other years. The official report of March production is not due until next week, but the total of all steel ingots in the first quarter may be estimated at 12,250,000 tons, and the rate during the last three weeks when there has been no material fluctuation, has been just about the same. The daily rate is between 155,000 and 160,000 tons, the annual rate being about 49,000,000 tons.

Up to 1928, no year showed as much as 47,000,000 tons. 1926 coming close to that figure while 1927 was down below 44,000,000 tons. Then came 1928 with slightly over 50,000,000 tons and 1929 with a little under 55,000,000 tons.

FARRELL'S PREDICTION

With one-fourth of the year now passed it is of interest to review afresh the attitude of the trade last December. President Farrell of the Steel Corporation then made a forecast that 1930 would be "a good average year" and general sentiment at the time was such as to make this appear to be a distinctly sanguine forecast. Clearly 47,000,000 or 48,000,000 tons as the 1930 total would bear out Mr. Farrell's forecast for that would make the year the best in history outside of two years that were considered exceptionally good at the time, and still should be.

If the remainder of the year maintains the average pace of the first quarter and the recent pace it will be a better year than was generally expected last December. The question is whether it will do so. Precedent is against that, though by only a few per cent. Commonly the second quarter runs a shade under the first quarter and the second half somewhat under the first half. Conditions are so peculiar, however, that much less reliance than usual should be placed on precedents.

MILL BACKLOGS

In the first place, seasonal improvement in steel demand may be regarded as retarded by the conservative attitude of everybody all down the line to points of ultimate consumption. In the second place, general trade should be making progress in recovery. The main effects of the stock market collapse, as a separate event, wore off long ago, and other effects, chiefly "frozen credits," are well in hand. As to recession in general trade, that began about the middle of last year and thus there have already been nine months for readjustment and recovery. In the automobile industry there have been five months of very light production, involving much liquidation of whatever was wrong in that direction.

The steel mills are without the backlogs they usually have at this date, but again precedent is not a good criterion for there was not the usual occasion for buyers to cover ahead. They have felt very conservative and the lack of strength in steel prices has been a separate deterrent influence. The mills may have good business during this new quarter just the same, by way of hand-to-mouth buying. Not being assured as to their operations, the mills have been light buyers of scrap and of certain other supplies, making an apparently unfavorable symptom, but in the circumstances this may mean little or nothing. They can buy more freely at any time and be assured of getting their supplies.

SHOE MERGER UNDERWAY

NEW YORK, April 5.—Negotiations are under way for the acquisition by Melville Shoe Company of Travelers Shoe Company. The Melville Company will acquire Travelers Shoe Store Corporation through an exchange of common stock for the assets of Travelers.

According to Frank Melville, president of Melville Shoe, the acquisition brings total stores under Melville direction to 505 with a yearly sales volume of more than $30,000,000.

The number of common shares to be given in exchange for Travelers stock will depend on the asset value as of April 1.

2 ASK $75,000 IN CAR HURTS

Two suits were filed in Common Pleas Court against the Pittsburgh Railways Co., for personal injuries in which the claimants ask $75,000 damages.

Mollie Waters who alleges her shoe caught in a step of a car of the defendant companuy throwing her to the ground, spraining her left leg, wants $25,000 damages. The accident happened April 4, 1928.

Nathan Marshall, Braddock, who suffered a fractured skull when a street car collided with his truck in Bell avenue, Braddock, seeks $50,000 damages.

GLASS TRADE BETTER

The sentiment in the window glass industry is improving, according to the National Glass Budget. The increased evidence rests upon a number of movements that have been started and which will undoubtedly have a stabilizing effect on the business. With the arrival of warmer weather there is a possibility that quite an amount of new business will be placed with the manufacturers. All orders now booked by the producers are accompanied with requests for immediate shipments.

At this writing the outlook is that the tariff question will be settled at a not far distant date and manufacturers and jobbers will then be in a position to go ahead with the conduct of their affairs with reasonable assurance of stability.

It is understood that a few of the window glass manufacturing firms have withdrawn some of the lower quotations and are only accepting business at firmer rates.

At the beginning of the month there were only seven firms operating 10 tanks to which were attached 66 machines that draw the glass in sheet form vertically from the tank. The production above referred to does not include the plants of the Libbey-Owens Glass Company.

Production of window glass was lower April 1 than it has been for years. It is estimated that there will not be more than 450,000 boxes of window glass manufactured in April.

Business in U. S. Continues Slow Progress

NEW YORK, April 5.—The latest weekly crop of indicators shows few promising buds in the tree of business except the precarious and premature strength in the stock market, and general trade throughout the country in the last weeks of March has not yet felt the effects of the spring tonic of easy money, says The Business Week in its report covering the week ended April 5.

Steel is struggling fairly successfully to hold its level at the average of years before 1929 in face of uncertain, scattered breezes of hand-to-mouth demand from sources outside automobiles, and at the cost of continuing weakness in prices. Building continues to bloom hopefully and modestly under warmer spring sunshine. Commodity prices, chiefly in agricultural groups, are somewhat steadier pending clearer determination of crop prospects.

KOPPERS SHOP OPENED

The Koppers Building barber shop, located in the basement of the Koppers Building, opened for business March 31.

The shop, with 11 barber chairs, was designed by Rorimer-Brooks Studios of Cleveland, O.

The general architectural treatment of the room is modern French with a pastel green, black and aluminum treatment carried throughout the walls, floors and the equipment.

The lavatories and chairs were made by Kohler, of St. Louis, and are finished in pastel green. The manicure room, which is adjacent to the main barber shop, has a special wall treatment, and all of the furnishings of this room were designed and built by Rorimer-Brooks Studio.

The lighting treatment is particularly unique, all the light being concealed at the ceiling line with a specially designed aluminum finished ceiling fixture fitted with cased glass.

The shop breaks away completely from the old traditional white tiled barber shop. The ceiling lines are particularly effective with a modernistic cornice extending lengthwise down the entire room, giving a domed effect to the ceiling. This domed effect assists materially in the lighting. The columns are treated with mirrors extending to the ceiling line which accentuates to the casual observer the length of the room.

Rorimer-Brooks Studios are designing at the present time the storeroom on the first floor of the Koppers Building to be occupied by B. Hirsch & Co., men's tailors. This shop when completed will follow largely the modernistic trend.

Heaviest Trading Since November

NEW YORK, April 5.—Trading on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday was the heaviest since November 13, 1929, the day on which Dow, Jones & Co. stock averages closed at the lowest point of the 1929 break, with industrials at 198.69 and rails at 128.07.

United Fuel Gas Gets Tax Refund

WASHINGTON, April 5.—United Fuel Gas Company, Inc., has been refunded $781,973 for overassessment of taxes during 1918, 1919 and 1920, reports the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

BEALLSVILLE, Pa., April 5.—"All ready for garden making," declared "Uncle George" Amos, 97, Beallsville's oldest citizen, who had been confined to his home for some time by illness. Dr. A. C. Amos, a well-known Pittsburgh dentist, is a son of "Uncle George."

Industrial Operations Take Slight Jump; Optimism Spreading

While irregularities still characterize the general trade situation in this section, there have been some encouraging developments which are having a tendency to create a more optimistic feeling among business men, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review.

Department store sales are in somewhat greater volume, and jobbers of men's and women's apparel, dry goods, and shoes, report a slight improvement in business, although the weather has been too cold for much activity as yet. While there has been comparatively little increase in activity in building lines thus far, a large volume of construction work, both in the way of building and road work, is anticipated and demand for building materials is expected to materially improve in the near future.

Hardware trade is rather quiet, demand for farm tools being held back by weather conditions, and builders' hardware being particularly slow. Demand for groceries and provisions continues quiet with prices averaging lower than for a number of years. Industrial operations are at a slightly higher rate than last week, with operations of steel mills estimated at about 76 per cent of capacity. There has been a light improvement in the demand for window glass, although volume of business continues much below normal.

COAL OUTPUT LOW

The demand for plate glass continues much lower than a year ago, due principally to less activity on the part of automobile manufacturers, as orders from other consuming industries are close to normal. Production of electrical equipment continues at a comparatively high rate, with demand steady and prospects appear favorable for a continuance of present activity. Movement of sanitary equipment, plumbing supplies and radiator equipment continues at a lower rate than a year ago, due to the lighter volume of construction throughout the country. Another moderate reduction is noted in the production of crude oil, with demand for refined products increasing gradually.

There has been no particular change in the bituminous coal market, production being somewhat lower, and demand very quiet, although improvement is looked for as soon as navigation opens on the Great Lakes. Western Pennsylvania grades of run-of-mine coal are quoted per net ton as follows: Steam coal, $1.25 to $1.75; gas coal, $1.65 to $1.75; coking coal, $1.50 to $1.75; steam slack, 80c to 90c, and gas slack, $1.00 to $1.10.

American Bosch Outlook Improves

BOSTON, April 5.—After being "in the red" for December, January and February, as the result of demoralization of the radio business, American Bosch Magneto Corporation broke even on its operations for March and from now on the outlook is for progressive improvement.

It is estimated the deficit for the first quarter will be between $150,000 and $200,000. This would compare with net profit of $223,192 after all charges in the first quarter of 1929.

TRAFFIC NEEDS MET BY NEW BRIDGES

Director Outlines Work Done by Important Part Of City Works Department

By EDWARD G. LANG,
Director of Public Works.

Pittsburgh in times past has been known throughout the industrial world as the Smoky City, later the Iron City, then the Steel City, and well might it be known at the present time as the City of Bridges. Pittsburgh has a greater number of bridges than any other city in the world.

We feel that the people are interested in some measure in the scope and building of these bridges, and the responsibilities resting on the Department of Public Works, through this bureau, with the safety and convenience offered to the people.

MAKES DESIGNS

The Bureau of Bridges and Structures has charge of the design, construction and maintenance of all city bridges and of certain other structures particularly assigned by the director of the department, such as concrete steps, tunnels, retaining walls and miscellaneous structures. It also is required to check the design of all private or public service corporation structures over city streets. It also has charge of the maintenance of all iron fences, the installation and maintenance of street signs and the installation and maintenance of monument boxes. The larger part of the work, of course, pertains to bridges.

There are 144 bridges in the city which have to be inspected and maintained. Of these 114 are highway bridges and 30 are foot bridges. The highway bridges vary from the large structures spanning the rivers to smaller bridges over streams and runs, such as those spanning Saw Mill Run in the West End district.

A large number of the city bridges were built before the day of the automobile and provision was not made to take care of the high, fast moving unit loads and, in many cases, provision was not made to take care of the enormous increase in traffic which has been brought about by the motor vehicle. As a result, many of these structures are inadequate, not only for the individual loads now using them, but also for the volume of traffic. These older structures are gradually being replaced. The last four years has seen the replacement of the Robert McAfee Bridge, previously known as the California Avenue Bridge, over Woods Run, and the Millvale and Aiken Avenue Bridges, both over the Pennsylvania Railroad, while the old Point Bridge has been demolished by the city and replaced by the county with the new structure.

CONTRACTS LET

During the four-year period just ended, 131 contracts were let for either the construction of new bridges or repairs to existing bridges. The cost of the work done on these contracts in that period was $2,700,000, while 16 uncompleted contracts were carried into 1930 with $100,000 worth of work still to be done.

In addition to the engineering forces engaged in the design and the supervision of the construction of new bridges and the repairs to old, a force of bridge inspectors is constantly inspecting old bridges. This is for the purpose of ascertaining weaknesses and dangerous conditions which might necessitate the sudden closing of an old structure and frequently results in repairs.

The total expenditures by the maintenance force for the past four years is $675,000, averaging $119,000 per year. This money includes not only wages, but also covers the purchase of materials, tools and equipment to handle the work. The total expenditures for this bureau for the four years ended January 1, 1930, including repair work, both by contract and by our own forces, the construction of new brioges and the salaries for engineering and clerical services, amount to $3,900,000, an average of $975,000 per year.

City Builder

E. G. LANG

Mr. Lang, director of the Department of Public Works who tells of progress made in city bridges in today's article.

GENERAL TRADE LEVEL LOWER

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Commercial transactions during the week ended March 29, as reflected by check payments, were lower than in either the previous week or the corresponding week of a year ago, according to the weekly statement of the Department of Commerce. Operations in steel plants during the latest reported week were on a lower level than in either the previous week and the same week of last year. Both the output of bituminous coal and the production of petroleum also showed declines from both periods.

The general index of wholesale prices was fractionally lower than in the previous week, showing a decline also from a year ago. Prices for cotton averaged higher than in the previous week but were lower than last year. Iron and steel prices were slightly lower than in either period. Copper prices were unchanged from the previous week but were lower than a year ago.

Bank loans and discounts at the end of the week were higher than in either the previous week or the same period of the preceding year. Prices for stocks showed further recovery during the week but were lower than a year ago. Interest rates on both time and call funds averaged higher than in the previous week but were considerably lower than for the corresponding week of last year.

California Standard Producer Brought In

LOS ANGELES, April 5.—Standard of California has completed its No. 81 well at Kettleman Hills from 7,035 feet, but no gauge on oil and gas production has been made. Field reports credit the well with 60,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily, with oil blowing into the air. There will be no gauge taken until gas is turned into the traps.

Car & Foundry Receives Order

NEW YORK, April 5.—The American Car and Foundry Company has received an order for 250 box cars from the Gulf, Mobile and Northern Railroad. An order for 500 box cars for the Louisiana and Arkansas Railroad has been received by the General American Car Corporation, a subsidiary of the General American Tank Car Corporation.

Columbia Pictures to Pay Dividend

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

STEADY growth in the earnings of Columbia Pictures Corporation leads to the belief that the common stock will be placed on a dividend basis in the near future. Net profit for the year ended June 30, 1930, after all charges, is expected to reach $1,000,000. This would be equivalent to $9.25 a share on the common stock after deducting preferred dividends.

The corporation is celebrating its tenth anniversary this month. A profit has been shown in each year since its organization. The rate of development is indicated by the fact that 81 cents a share was earned on the common stock in the year ended June 30, 1927. This increased to $1.75 in the 1928 fiscal year and to $4.77 a share in the last fiscal year.

Net profit of $479,129 for the first half of the present fiscal year was not far behind the earnings of the entire preceding year. Officials expect a higher rate of earnings in the latter half of the present fiscal period.

In Talkie Field

WHILE Columbia is a comparatively new arrival in the field of big productions, it is well fortified in the talking picture field. It is licensed under patents controlled by Western Electric Company through its subsidiary, Electrical Research Products, Inc. These patents give Columbia the same technical advantages as those enjoyed by Paramount, Fox, Warner, First National and Metro-Goldwyn.

The corporation operates fully equipped studios at Hollywood. Its executive and general offices are in New York City and 33 distributed offices are operated in the United States. Agents handle foreign distribution throughout the world. Extensive additions, particularly for talking pictures, have recently been completed at the Hollywood studios.

Organized in 1920

COLUMBIA PICTURES CORPORATION had its beginning in April, 1920, when its first "Screen Snapshot" was produced. The popularity of fan magazines gave birth to the idea that there was a field for the production of a series of short reels showing intimate glimpses of the celebrities of Hollywood in their homes and at play. The soundness of this idea is shown by the fact that Columbia still produces this type of picture although it now forms a very small part of the releases.

From this small beginning Columbia has grown steadily. Today it is a national producing and distributing organization. The production schedule for the present fiscal year consists of three super-feature pictures, eight special feature pictures and 15 feature pictures, all of which will be 100 per cent talking. The schedule also calls for 130 short subjects, of which 26 will be made under a contract with Victor Talking Machine Company, which gives Columbia the use of well known Victor artists.

Large Foreign Business

IN ADDITION to having distribution through the leading American circuits, Columbia is doing a very satisfactory foreign business. The year 1929 established a record for the exports of American films.

The management of the corporation is in the hands of the men who organized it. The leading executives were formerly identified with one of the largest motion picture companies.

$4,550,000 ZEP STAMPS SOLD

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP.)—A sell-out of three American air mail stamp issues to be printed for the May flights of the Graf Zeppelin, will bring $4,550,000 to the Postoffice Department.

Stamps costing $2.60 for letters and $1.30 for post cards will carry mail from New York to Friedrichshafen and aboard the dirigible across the Atlantic to South America, Lakehurst, N. J., and the American destination.

Rates of $1.30 for letters and 65 cents for cards will be charged for one-way mail trips on the air liner from Lakehurst to Seville, Spain, or Germany.

One million stamps of each denomination will be issued to mark "the first Europe-Pan-American round trip flight of the Graf Zeppelin."

Employment Gains In Automotive Work

Employment in 51 Toledo (O.), major plants, mainly automotive, during the week ended April 4, totaled 27,285 workers, an increase of 349 over the preceding week. This compares with 46,853 employed a year ago.

Discuss Big British Motor Combine

LONDON, April 5.—Conversations are proceeding between London financiers in regard to reviving a plan for grouping at least 12 British motor companies under one control, with a capital of £25,000,000. In sympathy with the plan, it is stated, are British interests with home and world associations of capital value of £140,000,000.

Bond Offerings Lower in Week

NEW YORK, April 5.—New bond offerings this week totaled $85,180,000, compared with $103,563,000 last week, and $62,955,000 in the corresponding week of 1929.

LOCAL EXHIBIT POPULAR

Architects, builders and the general public are beginning to appreciate the convenience of a permanent exhibit, where they may inspect materials, appliances and equipment.

This display has been open more than a year and visitors express agreeable surprise that they can see and compare different lines at the same time.

Many new ideas are there and prospective builders can secure literature and information. There is no sales pressure, as the exhibit does not sell or quote prices.

The Architects and Builders Exhibit, 514 Seventh avenue, is a Pennsylvania corporation owned and operated by Pittsburghers. The advisory board is composed of M. Nirdlinger, appointed by the Pittsburgh Chapter, American Institute of Architects; R. R. Cappe, appointed by the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, and William F. Trimble, Jr., appointed by the Builders' Exchange of Pittsburgh.

Several displays are connected, so salesmen can bring their prospects for a demonstration and interested visitors can see the operation of the appliances.

The exhibit is open to the public every day, and visitors are always welcome and under no obligation.

PUBLIC INVITED TO PLANT

The Oswald-Hess Packing Company has issued a standing invitation to the public to visit its modern plant to see how fresh meats are prepared under the rigid inspection of the strict Pennsylvania state sanitation laws. The organization also packs Delicious Brand hams, bacon, luncheon meats and wieners.

George Hess, president of the company, states that the payroll of meat packers in the Pittsburgh district amounts ot about $5,000,000 a year. He suggests that this can be greatly increased by the co-operation of the public in patronizing the local meat dealers.

The Oswald-Hess Packing Company is the fastest growing business of its kind in the Pittsburgh district and attributes its unusual success to the quality of service rendered to both meat dealers and the public. For many years the firm has been emphasizing the advantage to the housewife of buying meats that are fresh and which have none of their flavor frozen out. Oswald-Hess meats are prepared in Pittsburgh and reach the consumer with a minimum lapse of time.

Improvement Seen In Bottle Business

Factories devoted to the production of bottles and glass containers are more active. Some additional operating capacity was started up during the past week. From reports it is evident that the demand for wide mouth ware is slightly above the volume of business that is in evidence at the first of April each year. Shipments of bottles for the soft drink business are increasing. Orders for other lines of ware are understood to be just about up to the average.

Big Gold Shipment By Australian Bank

MELBOURNE, Australia, April 5.—The Commonwealth Bank arranged to ship overseas £8,000,000 gold (about $40,000,000), making £24,500,000 which has been shipped abroad since July 1, 1929. While the general object is to relieve the exchange position, the gold also is needed to meet national obligations and interest due overseas.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Irregular — Lone Star Gas Spurts

STOCK MARKET IRREGULAR AT START

Initial Blocks Offered Not as Large as Earlier In Week; Trend Upward

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP.)—Stock prices moved irregularly higher at the opening of today's stock market, but the initial blocks were not as large as they had been earlier in the week. Radio common opened with a block of 7,000 shares at 61¾, up ½. Columbian Carbon showed a net gain of 2¼ and St. Paul preferred. Westinghouse Electric and International Harvester advanced a point or more. American Telephone dropped 1¾ and Wabash and Union Carbide 1 each. General Electric and Warner Brothers Pictures each opened fractionally lower on blocks of 10,000 shares.

Irregularity continued through the early dealings, but the main price tendency again appeared to be upward. Establishment of a new high volume of trading for the year yesterday was believed to reflect increased public participation, but several commission houses continued to urge caution on the theory that the recent advance had been too rapid.

Columbia Gas opened with a block of 12,000 shares at 84½, up 1½, and a new high record. Stone & Webster, Engineers Public Service, Consolidated Gas, General Electric, Park & Tilford, Colorado Fuel, Archer-Daniels-Midland and Dominion Stores also sold at their highest prices of the year.

Pacific Lighting, Standard Gas and Electric, Johns-Manville and Otis Elevator were heavy.

Foreign exchanges opened easier, with sterling cables quoted a shade lower at $4.86½.

STOCK BUYING QUALITY NOW INFERIOR

Return of Speculation Seen in Increase in March Brokers' Loans

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

(Copyright, 1930, Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, April 5.—Broadly speaking, the quality of stock buying since about the beginning of March has been inferior to that of the two previous months.

This deduction is suggested by the persistent rise during March in brokers' loans, marking an increase, according to the stock exchange compilation, of $488,713,987. The increase in loans made through members of the New York Federal Reserve Bank in the same period rose $331,000,000, and a further rise of $148,000,000 was reported this week. The significance of these figures may be grasped when it is pointed out that the increase since the beginning of March in security loans of New York banks has slightly more than offset the decrease in January and February.

Loan totals, of course, have not yet returned to a figure that is dangerous from a strictly credit standpoint. They merely reflect an increasing tendency to shift from the hands of conservative outright owners to more venturesome marginal holders. From a credit standpoint, brokers' loans are still at a safe level. According to the compilation of the Stock Exchange they are still $3,893,081,640 below the record break established last September before the panic.

SPECULATION SEEN

From a banking standpoint, the persistent rise in brokers' loans is significant chiefly in so far as it indicates that the deliberate easing policy of the Federal Reserve has been promoting speculation. So far the Federal Reserve Board has shown no apprehension over the situation. In the last official utterance, Roy A. Young, governor, called upon the business community, on the contrary, to show less hesitation. And yet the rise in brokers' loans helps to explain why this column took the position more than a fortnight ago that perhaps the easing program had run its full course, and that the next major change in Federal Reserve policy would perhaps be in the direction of putting on the screws again.

With its portfolio of acceptances abnormally large for this time of year and with its holdings of government securities heavy, the Federal Reserve is in good technical position to rebuke the market when and if it desires by temporarily shifting its open market policy, reducing its portfolio holdings, instead of tampering with the rediscount rate.

RATE DECLINE HELPS

If the observer focusses his attention on the immediately visible economic facts, it would be also possible to argue that stocks have gone up because business has been off. As a result of shrunken payrolls and reduced sales, the demand for currency has fallen off. That fact, plus gold imports, has helped to ease interest rates, and speculation in stocks has been promoted by a decline in money rates.

But the stock market bulls have been betting on business recovery, and the economic signposts still point to distinctly improved business in the second half of the year.

If such hopes are fulfilled the longer term outlook for the best grade of stocks would point to higher, rather than lower, prices before the end of the year. But the market participant should acquaint himself with the changing quality of stock ownership, and realize that the rise in brokers' loans may indicate greater vulnerability to intermediate reactions than the market showed in January and February. The other side of the argument is that the ratio between stock prices and brokers' loans is still distinctly a healthy one.

"STREET" SETS STYLES

The country looks to the stock exchange for fashions other than financial, according to one of New York's chief haberdashers, who says: "Today, whether he is aware of it or not, the well dressed American over the country at large, follows the lead of the fashion setting younger members of the New York Stock Exchange. And his particular 'type' doesn't matter at all. He wears what's fashionable — and, today, what Wall Street wears is fashion."

Walter Chrysler, the auto manufacturer, anticipates no prolonged downward readjustment in his industry.

"We do not anticipate any so-called 'cycle of depression' over the next five years," Mr. Chrysler points out, in Printer's Ink. "Estimates from reliable sources anticipate the production during the period of 26,000,000 automobiles, or an average of 5,200,000 vehicles per year. If these estimates are realized, and they are a reasonable and conservative expectancy, it will actually constitute an increase of 14 per cent from 1930-34 as against the period of 1925-29.

"Conceding that 1930 will show a decrease over 1929, it is still generally believed that 1930 will equal or surpass the production of any year previous to 1929."

WHITE HOUSE GANG

Disbandment of Gang Is Unpleasant for Boys

Theodore Roosevelt, when President of the United States, started the adventurous, rollicking, joyous career of the White House Gang by sending his youngest son, Quentin, to the Force Public School in Washington. Here the gang was recruited. The accredited members are Charles (Tuffy) Taft, "Brom" Seeley, Dick (Sailor) Chew, Edward (Slats) Stead, also called "Bedstead," Walker White, "T. R.," the most active member of the gang; Quentin, the leader, and Earle Looker, the author of this story.

Each day, after school, the gang went into a huddle to confound all rules of deportment in high places, mingle in the lives of presidents and policemen, win victories, taste honor, suffer punishments and engage in escapades which were swept along the wires to national publicity. Many exploits of the gang, however, either remain unknown or were known only to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Some there were securely hidden even from them.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Q's logic was felt to be absolutely indisputable. Yet we continued to gaze on the letter with burning curiosity and on the money with covetousness. A motion to open up and read was overruled by Q.

"We'd better not," he declared, "because, then, we might come to know some things we ought not to know." And that sounded wise, too.

The amazing thing, perhaps, was our final decision. Having sworn utter secrecy, and feeling more than righteous — heroic even—we placed the sealed envelope, with whatever it contained, together with the perfectly negotiable ten-dollar bill, with its amazing possibilities for us all, into the grate of an open fireplace; Q placed a match to them with a hand that trembled a little, and we watched them speedily consume.

"Ashes to ashes," Q quoted solemnly, out of his amazing knowledge, "dust to dust. . . ."

Despite the apparent triviality of this incident, it represented, nevertheless, a conception of the highest standards of honor which the Gang had come to hold,—a conception, moreover, which had been arrived at slowly and laboriously, as the result of the splendid counsel of TR. A few months earlier the Gang would have delivered the message, and undoubtedly fattened on the proceeds of the transaction.

The form of the oath taken, specifically stipulated that the whole affair be kept from the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. That oath I have now broken. Some dire calamity may befall me therefor. But I have taken the risk simply because Q was the guiding spirit in the development of the incident, and the narration thereof furnishes concrete evidence of that small gentleman's fine sense of honor. And a full membership was on hand, that morning, thereby making the discussion the more violent, and Q's decision the more difficult. . . .

Record Ends

Here the actual record of the Gang abruptly ends. Quentin went away to Alexandria, to attend another school, and the realization of disbandment closed about us like a gray fog.

"Gosh!" I said. "What are we going to do now?"

Q looked at us with genuine understanding. He felt the poignancy of parting, swallowed hard, and finally said: "You all know the Pension Office—down at the end of F street? Well, all around that building, you remember, is a frieze-thing—guns and horses, and wagons, and soldiers, and sailors, marching. The best thing for us all to do, is just to try to keep on, like that—marching on for ever and ever—"

When the Roosevelts left Washington and the Tafts took over the ruling of its then-known earth, the Gang carried on. But, somehow, the old days of joyously riotous behavior had gone forever. For one thing, we were growing older, and, in some very important of its aspects, the Gang just naturally died when the small boy, in each of us, gave place to one of a larger, less spontaneous age and mould. But the story was by no means ended. As a matter of plain fact, it was no end at all, but a beginning, for Quentin and for us all.

The chronicle of the White House Gang covers but a short period in the boyhood of its members. A similar period, in the life of every child, is as crammed with a wealth of incident as important as our own. The scene—be it the White House or any other home in America—is, relatively, of little consequence. In this period, the training, in the school of the gang, is the preliminary to the sterner instruction of the school of life. Yet the school of the gang contains a highly concentrated experience; it moves rapidly forward—as in time of war—from the school of the soldier to the life of the squad, platoon and company.

Like Other Boys

Although greatly daring, greatly talented, greatly promising, Q, except for a few things, was in no way different from any other boy of similar age who is intelligently allowed to grow. Neither the President nor Mrs. Roosevelt saw the slightest harm in Q following the pursuits of a normal boy. There was no disturbance over his spoiling a pair of breeches, when entangled in a barbed-wire fence; there was no undue worry about his sobbing breath, when he played the "hare" in a paper-chase, and the "hounds" were hot on his trail; there was no outflaring of indignation when he was discovered with great welts upon his legs, where members of the Gang had snapped him with towels; there was no expressed astonishment when, at breakfast, in the sun of the south portico, he put an empty tumbler to his face and sucked in the air. Q's mother and father knew perfectly well that in all and from all these things Quentin was learning to be a real boy who, one day, would grow to be a real man.

There was never the slightest question as to the absolutely democratic philosophy of Theodore Roosevelt, or of his lifelong application of it to all his relations with his fellows, and there was never a President of the United States whose utterances were more straightforward, more sincere, more generally known and understood. One of the many details incidental to the understanding he engendered was the small yet important change he made from "The Executive Mansion" to the simpler and hence far more dignified "White House."

Quentin Angered

Q once expounded his father's ideas very tersely, and in words which could not have been other than a paraphrase of TR'S own. Accused, one day, of taking up with a boy who was "common," Q flushed with anger. "My father," said he, speaking with the utmost distinctness and vigor, "says that there are only four kinds of boys—good boys, bad boys, white boys and black boys. What, exactly, do you mean by 'common'?"

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt paid no attention to the bare fact of poverty or wealth; to conventional social position or the lack of it: what they did set value upon, were ideas and perspectives, and their mutual exchange. One may well ask: how came a small boy—a group of small boys—to know anything of all this? The answer is short, and almost absurdly simple: he saw it working — given full effect — every single day he was privilized, as Q's friend, to set foot in the White House.

There was surely little if anything in the escapades of the White House Gang to remind Mrs. Roosevelt of the mothers of its members. Yet she did remember; and, sometimes, a special White House messenger would appear at some boy's house, with flowers for his mother. This gesture, from one woman to another, seemed to us to be a very beautiful one—as in very truth, it was; and it was also a message, that their interests commonly met in their children. My own mother, I know, was deeply appreciative. . . .

Childhood Experience

Of all that has been written concerning the amazing record of Theodore Roosevelt, and of the wise, sympathetic and understanding help given him by Mrs. Roosevelt, nothing (to me) appears to be finer, more worthy of study and of emulation than their relationship to Q and the White House Gang. A particular phase of the intelligence with which the Gang was handled was, that whenever the personality of the President or Mrs. Roosevelt touched ours, the contact was as casual as that between old friends, as careful as that between new and eager ones.

As parents, this wonderfully understanding man and woman knew it to be an important part of their duty to acquaint themselves with the significance of childhood experience; to enter the province of its thought, to be cognizant of its present and forward looking complications; to be mindful of changes of mental pace. And they drew their children's friends within the sympathetic circle of their own fine lives. What affected Q and his welfare, affected the fellow-members of his Gang. So, accordingly, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt ordered their influence and attitude.

The world of grown men and women is complicated enough; yet it becomes much simpler, much happier, much more personally satisfactory when an attempt is made to follow again the way we once came, this time, however, with our own children, as they fight their way through. Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt knew this and lived it, and their happiness was reflected upon us. They were two great souls—rather one—and Quentin, even at the early age of Gang fellowship, demonstrated that there had already been passed to him, in generous measure, many of the fine traits of his illustrious father and wonderful mother.

Quentin's Career Ends

No personal contact, with the President or Mrs. Roosevelt, could ever prove evanescent. The love borne them by the Gang, of which their boy was a member, is among those things that are destined not to die. Of this fact, I have been given recent and full demonstration. After the passing of 20 years, recent conversations with various members of the Gang left me quite shaken with emotion. Yet the writing of these records has given to the members of the White House Gang a great, and poignant, pleasure—we have been brought together again, even though Quentin be no longer with us. The debt we owe him, and his father and mother, is simply undischargeable. We knew that—dimly—even as children. We know it better—more fully—now.

Every slow advance we have made toward the happiness of a rational, purposeful, joyous life of accomplishment has come from just such men and women. Their greatness of spirit gave us standards at which to aim. Q succeeded in these attempts; at Groton, at Harvard. When he was but 20, during the World War, he became one of that courageous company of airmen, perhaps the last real order of chivalry the world may ever see, fighting eagerly, gayly, impetuously, in a righteous cause . . .

I hope perhaps that Q may have looked down over his cockpit upon an infantry officer in the mud at the same instant I was looking up at the gleam of the sun on the wings of a fighting ship, and wondering what knight was riding out to battle. Winging high up in the blue over the fighting lines, Q finally went out on his last patrol, to his rendezvous with death. Where he fell, on the field of honor at Chamery, is the simple inscription in French: "Lieut. Quentin Rooseve't, Escadrille 95. Tombe glorieusement, En combat aerien, Le 14 Juillet 1918, Pour le droit, Et la Liberte."

But his spirit goes "marching on for ever and ever" in our hearts.

COLUMBIA GAS SUBSIDIARY FORMED

Oil and Gas Properties Made Separate Company; Holders to Get New Shares

Directors of the Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation propose to segregate the oil and gasoline properties of the system from its public utility business and have adopted a plan of reorganization for the company.

The plan contemplates formation of a new corporation to be called the Columbia Oil and Gasoline Corporation.

The new Columbia Oil and Gasoline Corporation will issue to Columbia Gas and Electric its preferred and common stocks consisting of 2,350,000 common shares, 337,500 shares of 6 cumulative first preferred stock and an equal amount of similar second preferred stock all of no par value.

VOTING TRUST PLANNED

Entire issue of common stock is to be deposited under a voting trust agreement certificates for which will be distributed June 30 to holders of Columbia Gas and Electric common of record May 24 in the ratio of one share for each five shares of Columbia Gas and Electric common outstanding. The voting trust will continue for 10 years unless sooner terminated by voting trustees.

The preferred stocks of Columbia Oil and Gasoline Corporation will be placed in the treasury of Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation.

EARNING POWER

The cumulative annual dividend requirements of the two issues of preferred to be received by Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation equal the amount of the entire 1929 net earnings of the oil and gasoline subsidiaries, after giving effect to the terms of new contracts. On this basis, the corporation's statement says, it is obvious that until the average annual net earnings of the new company exceed the 1929 earning power of the properties, there will be no earnings available for dividends on its common stock.

Acquisition of the Consumers' Natural Gas Company was also announced by Columbia Gas and Electric directors.

New York Pig Iron Sales Show Decline

Sales of pig iron in the New York market have receded this week somewhat from the high level of last week, but are in fair volume. Lately around 1,000 tons of iron for spot shipment has appeared on the list of inquiries. Altogether there is around 3,500 tons wanted.

Bank Offerings Higher in March

NEW YORK, April 5.—Volume of new bond offerings in this market for March totaled $582,976,000 against 344,857,000 in February and $335,385,700 in March, 1929. This brought the aggregate for the initial quarter of 1930 to $1,552,681,000 as against $970,636,450 in the first quarter of 1929.

Trade Area Bank Favored by Young

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Many of difficulties now confronting rural districts in bank failures would have been avoided had trade area branch banking been permitted years ago, Governor Young of the Federal Reserve Board, told the House Banking and Currency Committee. He agreed with a member of the committee that the biggest argument in favor of branch banking was that the banks in a system would have to go to the assistance of any one of the members which were experiencing a run by depositors or any similar distressing condition. He added that there was less likelihood of a run on a bank in a branch system than on an independent unit bank.

He saw no serious situation which might develop and believed that the 12 Federal Reserve districts with the 25 branch districts comes as close as is practicable to limited trade areas.

SHEET STEEL DEMAND UP

CLEVELAND, April 5.—Sheet steel demand is picking up and the mills are stepping up production, independent producers in the Youngstown district now operating at the best rate attained this year, according to Daily Metal Trade. Prospects for additional car building in western shops have improved decidedly, and rail mill operations in the district are continuing close to capacity though no new rail tonnage has been placed.

Steel sales at Cleveland are small but sellers in the district expect a pickup in buying this month. Price concessions on certain products are heard from time to time and it is apparent that the market has not yet settled. Plate demand is spotty in the East, although heavy tonnage is in prospect. Pig iron business is less active, but a moderate movement continues.

New Columbia Oil Shares Open at 17

NEW YORK, April 5. — Voting trust certificates of the newly formed Columbia Oil and Gasoline Corporation were admitted to trading on the New York Produce Exchange today, and were active between 17 and 17½.

National Dairy Expanding Outlets

NEW YORK, April 5.—National Dairy Products Corporation continued its steady annual growth last year by increasing sales volume to $300,021,483 from $212,632,076 in 1928 with a corresponding gain in net profits to $21,576,176 from $16,010,169 in the preceding year. Completion of the recently arranged combination with Kraft-Phenix Cheese Corp. will add an additional $86,000,000 in annual sales volume and other acquisitions now pending will probably bring National Dairy's volume above $400,000,000 in 1930.

Sales volume of this size is larger than that of any other company in the food product field at present, and is exceeded by few companies selling directly to the public.

The plan behind National Dairy's great program of expansion which has been underway ever since the founding of the company in 1923, has been to build up a nation-wide chain of efficiently operated units selling milk and ice cream. Wide geographic coverage, of course, makes for stability of earning power, while the proper balancing of ice cream and milk distribution makes for the economical use of surplus production.

Wheat Surplus Solution: Let Us Consume It

— By B. C. FORBES —

THE newer generation takes to the newer industries. Like President Hoover's sons, Owen D. Young's oldest is devoting himself to radio. Charles D. Young's achievement in developing a machine which printed a San Francisco newspaper page flashed across the continent by radio to General Electric's research laboratory lands him, at one bound, in the class of John Hays Hammond, Jr., the inventor son of a notable parent.

Young had another son, who also chose not to follow in the parental legal footsteps. He went West and joined a leading electric light and power company's working force. While still a mere youth, he tragically lost his life. Charles, who is around 30, is tied up with a branch of the Radio Corporation of America which delves into new things, affording abundant scope for research and inventive genius.

Perhaps it was the news of this latest triumph in the radio field which caused radio shares to jump to a new peak for the year yesterday morning. Apparently the science of radio is only in its infancy, with unimagined potentialities ahead.

WHAT to do with our surplus wheat is the most pressing agricultural problem facing the United States. Lee Marshall, president of the Continental Baking Corporation and one of the biggest buyers of wheat in the country, offers this novel solution—novel in that no one else has urged it:

"Consume it."

If we consumed our surplus, about 120,000,000 bushels, we would still be eating less than half as much bread as most Europeans and less than half, also, of Canada's per capita consumption. Although we raise the most wheat, we eat the least bread.

Marshall, when asked if he could offer any suggestion concerning the plight this country finds itself in, made the following statement for readers of this column:

"The present unfortunate and unsound wheat situation in this country is traceable directly to the war. Everybody was then taught to say less bread and the farmers were exhorted to put more acreage in wheat. This may have been necessary as a wartime measure, but the country has never recovered from the evil results of it. It is up to the government to undo what it then brought about. There is no hope for practical farm relief unless we consume more wheat.

"Consumption of wheat in the United States today is one bushel per capita less than it was prior to the war. A return to pre-war consumption would exactly take care of the wheat surplus, which is about 120,000,000 bushels over and above our exports. The only way to solve the problem is to consume what we grow or grow what we can consume.

"There is no use trying to 'dump' our surplus wheat abroad, since wheat surplus is literally a world-wide condition. Most European countries in normal years produce a surplus. They are erecting tariff barriers against imports of wheat. Germany today is conducting an 'eat more bread' campaign, actively supported by the government, to solve its own surplus problem. The League of Nations, recognizing that whea' surplus is an international problem, is trying to work out a solution.

"But we will have to help ourselves. The government cannot solve our problem by supporting the Chicago wheat market—all that we could do would be to fill the government's pockets with wheat. If the country continues to produce a surplus, we shall finally either have to 'dump' it, if we can, or destroy it—the cost coming out of the taxpayers' pocket.

If the Farm Board, the Department of Agriculture or any other governmental agency would simply try to undo what the government did during the war the problem would be solved. The government induced the country to consume less bread and the farmers to grow more breadstuffs. By aggressive government organization now, the reverse could be brought about and the solution would be automatic.

"What the country needs is a true appraisal of the value of bread as a food. A great deal of harm has been done by food faddists. The work of the Food Research Institute at Leland Stanford University and of the Department of Agriculture has made the real facts available to the Government. The country as a whole should be informed of them."

GO WHERE you will in Wall Street at the moment, you are urged to buy this, that or the next stock. The popular notion—conviction, even — is that quite a brisk advance is on the way.

Financial highest-ups figure that if stocks are forced considerably higher, there will be a sharp reaction. They contend that conditions do not warrant fireworks.

Frigidaire Corp. Production Higher

All first quarter production records were broken by Frigidaire Corporation during the first three months of 1930, according to E. G. Biechler, president and general manager. More men are being employed than ever before at this time of the year, he stated.

"This increase in employment took place after the installation of a large amount of labor saving machinery, which in itself was counted upon to take care of a normal increase in business without additions to the personnel during the first quarter," he said.

The company expects to again break all records in 1930.

Building Trade Faces Period Of Activity

NEW YORK, April 5.—Heavy construction and engineering building operations in the United States face a period of undiminished activity, to judge from the large volume of projects that reached the proposed stage during the past week, the Construction Daily reports. Educational and unclassified work accounted for 66 per cent of the value of all jobs, which totaled $136,448,000, comparing with $53,823,000 in the previous week and $132,500,000 in the similar week last year.

Aggregating $466,045,00, proposed heavy construction projects announced throughout the country during March exceeded in value both January and February and revealed a steady rate of high activity in public work and industrial structures.

STEEL LEADER SEES NEW CYCLE

Myron C. Taylor Forecasts Another Great Push Ahead In Industrial Development

NEW YORK, April 5. — Tracing the development of the nation from a primarily agricultural state in its beginning, Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the finance committee of the United States Steel Corporation, in a talk at the Commodore Hotel on the occasion of the Cornell Alumni roll call, forecast higher standards of living and further development of the industrial life of the nation.

"We are on the threshold of another great cycle," Mr. Taylor said, "from which, due to the inventive genius of our people, their natural progressiveness, and their willingness to labor, will come developments that will heighten productive possibilities, effecting economies in the cost of commodities and affording to an ever widening circle the fullest enjoyment of these opportunities.

MORE LEISURE

"As a consequence of these great changes man will find more free time at an earlier period in life and the question naturally will arise, how shall he spend that time to his own advantage as well as to the advantage of those with whom he is associated? Our great laboratories and scientists, and the younger group of men who are making research their chief effort, will reveal, at the moment when Providence so ordains, still more marvelous things than any heretofore within man's grasp, and endless opportunities for his further cultivation and enjoyment of life will thus be opened. All the more reason exists, therefore, for preparation to fit him to enjoy the newfound freedom that assuredly awaits him.

CULTURAL FACTORS

"The cultural side of man must in this new cycle be given prominent attention, that in his hours of freedom from the practical affairs of life he may have a forum in which to indulge his mind and soul in ways uplifting and exalting.

"To prepare for this new cycle, it is the duty of all institutions of learning so to expand their facilities that they may offer in the best possible form a general knowledge of the arts and sciences, thereby awakening in the youthful mind a definite interest which will provide a key to open the doors of the mind to that illimitable treasure-house wherein lie life's greatest treasures.

AIDS TO STABILITY

"If education is to accomplish anything, it must build character, inculcate and strengthen sound ideas through a true power of analysis, and an ability thoroughly to examine facts. It should teach men greater self-respect. It should impose and exalt man's humanity to man. These and other influences which follow from it should help to maintain the stability of the community, preserving and defending it against false prophets and extremists.

"In the cycle through which we have been passing we have perhaps had our minds too closely concentrated upon material things. It becomes our duty now to lift our eyes to the hills, that we may be given strength to cultivate the artistic, the more perfect and the more soulful and eternal things of life."

Grantham Big Asset. Brightens Buc Outlook. Elder May Join Cubs.

Still Soft for Carnera. O'Doul on Batting. Grimes Likely to Sign.

PIRATE SECOND-SACKER IS REAL STAR

ONE bright ray that pierces the gloom of the Pirates' spring misfortune is the fact that George Grantham is still in one piece and speeding along toward top form for the start of the pennant race a week from next Tuesday. Grantham's work has been a big feature of many of the practice games, and the indications that he has fully recovered from the effects of last year's severe injuries and will be as good as new when the 1930 fight begins form one of the most encouraging items in the general Buccaneer prospect.

George Grantham

Don't overlook this sterling pastimer when you're summing up the Pittsburgh face cards. He means much to the Rovers at all times, a whole lot more than he is generally given credit for meaning. He would mean a great deal to any club in the country, for that matter. It isn't often that you hear him mentioned when the topliners of the game are being discussed, but as a matter of fact he is one of the most valuable players that ever stood on spikes. George may not be so flashily aggressive as some others, nor so full of competitive spirit as to hold the same attention, but when there are big things to be done he is rarely found wanting.

HITTING power, speed, judgment and daring on the bases, defensive skill, a throwing arm, versatility and a will to do anything to win a ball game—Grantham has them all. Measured up as an all-around ball player, he ranks abreast of the best. He has batted above .300 in six consecutive years, has played first, second and third bases and also in the outfield in his five seasons as a Pirate, and in a general sense has been one of the biggest assets of the Pittsburgh club.

Though valuable at every stage of a pennant chase, Grantham is of particular worth to his team in the early part of a campaign. He is one of the greatest spring hitters in baseball and no club can boast an individual factor that is of greater aid in sending it off to a successful start. That's why the present good form of the versatile George, now returned to second base and willing, as usual, to play wherever he is needed, makes the Pirate outlook so much brighter than it would be otherwise. The prospect of a normal spring and a normal season for Grantham is one of the biggest items favoring the Pirate cause.

ANOTHER star athlete of the collegiate field is to go in for big league baseball, according to reports. Jack Elder, track and gridiron luminary of Notre Dame, possesses a lot of diamond ability, too, and is said to be in line for a tryout in the majors.

Jack Elder

Elder was a pitcher in high school and college, but it is with the idea of converting him into an outfielder on account of his speed that some big league agents are reported to be on his trail. If he decides to make the attempt it is thought that he will land with one of the Chicago clubs, the Cubs having the inside track.

PERHAPS it was only part of the smoke-up, to make it appear that the best man available was being sought, but there was some delay in making known the identity of Primo Carnera's opponent in the giant's first bout on the Pacific coast and his fourteenth in the United States, which is to be perpetrated next Tuesday night in Los Angeles. The Olympic promoters have finally announced that Carnera will be faced by Neal Clisby, California Negro. That doesn't spell much danger for Primo. George Godfrey knocked out Clisby in the seventh round of a bout in Los Angeles on July 5, 1927. Godfrey wasn't straining himself at the time, and Clisby hasn't done anything since to indicate that he has improved. Primo is to get a $10,000 guarantee, with the privilege of 50 per cent of the house, which is expected to gross almost $40,000. More awaits him in Oakland and San Francisco. The birthrate is as high on the coast as elsewhere.

NOT only does Johnny Mostil appear to have cinched the center field job in the Giant lineup for the start of the season, but Manager John McGraw has selected him as lead-off man in the batting order. Mostil will be followed by Leach or Reese, left field; Lindstrom, third base; Terry, first base; Ott, right field; Jackson, shortstop; Marshall, second base, and then the catcher and pitcher.

"Though Terry does not drive in as many runs as Ott," said McGraw, in explaining the naming of Bill for the clean-up position, "he gets on the bases often and it's a fine thing to have a hitter like Ott trailing him to bat him around with a long hit. If the pitchers walk Ott as frequently as they did last year, and Jackson doesn't hit as well as I think he will, I can always move Hogan or O'Farrell up to the position directly behind Ott and thus get the needed punch there.

LEFTY O'DOUL says his capture of the National League batting championship last year represented much deep thinking as well as a lot of successful swinging. "I changed my style for every pitcher and figured out how every club was working on me," Lefty disclosed to Gordon MacKay.

Lefty O'Doul

"You know, every ball club has skull practice in the mornings. The hitters to be faced later in the day are gone over, and there is a general discussion as to what each opponent likes and doesn't like. So they decide to pitch to me a certain way. All right. Notice me and you'll see that I don't get all worried or worked up about the first couple of pitches.

"IF I DISCOVER that they're going to pitch low and outside to me, I change my style. If they start throwing them high, I straighten up to meet them. I have an advantage over most hitters, and that is that I once was a pitcher myself. Therefore I know what a pitcher is likely to come through with when he has me in a certain position. For instance, I stand up there and say to myself, 'Got two and one on O'Doul; what would I throw him now?' Then I'm set for the stuff that I'd use myself in the same situation if I were pitching, and in most instances that is exactly what the pitcher throws to me.

"THE secret of hitting as I have found it is that you must get the body swing. The guy who hits while pulling in his stomach is overboard. He'll never be a hitter as long as he lives, because he won't be able to get any strength into his swing. The dope that Al Simmons hits with his foot in the bucket is all wrong. He merely steps back. He's always able to swing that old hip around and get all of his power into his cut. That's the reason why he's a great hitter. He gets his swing and his foot doesn't enter into it at all.

"Many a night last year I thought about my hitting. I wouldn't go to sleep for a long time, just thinking, especially when I felt that I was in a slump. I'd go over in my mind what I had done each time at bat. Had I pulled in my stomach? Did I have my hip swinging properly? Was I timing the ball right? Was I choking my bat and

220 NATATORS SLATED TO COMPETE

By JESS CARVER

Some 220 sturdy young high schoolers will emulate as many fish this afternoon, competing in the first annual Carnegie Tech Interscholastic Aquatic Relay meet, which will be splashed off in the Tartan gym beginning at 3 o'clock.

Henry Blum

These 220, representing 19 different schools and split up into 26 different relay teams, senior and junior, pay right noble tribute to the popularity with which Tech's swim meet has meet on this, its birth.

There are eight events in all on the program, four for senior high teams and four for juniors. A breast stroke, back stroke and free style relay of 200 yards each, and a medley event of 150 yards is offered for the seniors, the same, only over 100 and 75 yard courses, being listed for the juniors.

The meet will be in charge of Coach Allen Risedorph, with Henry Blum serving in the capacity of referee. The portly Henry will also keep any given dozen spectators from being splashed when ever he stands in front of 'em.

SCRIMMAGE TODAY

Munhall, Schenley, Baxter, Langley, Gladstone Fifth, Latimer, Westinghouse, Herron Hill, Taylor Allerdice, South, South Hills, Butler, Coraopolis, Carrick, Tarentum, Wilkinsburg, Peabdoy and Clairton have teams entered.

In the event you want to see some blood spilled, take a run out to Carnegie Tech's Bowl this mawnin' and if Bob Waddell will let you in, you'll see the Tartans put on a bit of a scrimmage.

Today's workout is slated to begin at 10 o'clock, and the boys will be given a bit of rough work about eleven, or thereabouts.

HOLAHAN RE-SIGNED

A contract covering his third year as graduate manager of athletics at Duquesne University was signed yesterday by John D. Holahan, according to an announcement by the Athletic Council. The contract takes effect July 1 when Manager Holahan's present one expires and will extend to July, 1, 1931.

Previous to being named as graduate manager, Holahan was student manager for four years. Much of the progress made by the Duquesne University in athletics in late years has been due to the efforts of Holahan. One of his more recent innovations was the inauguration of night football last autumn.

The Tipoff

Doc Carlson, of Pitt, and Chick Davies, of Duquesne, mostly celebrated as basketball coaches, rode the same freight car in Chicago Friday night, where they are attending the annual confab of the basketball coaches at the Hotel Windemere.

With his appendix out, and his physical well being greatly benefited, Murray Armentrout will be more of an asset than ever to Tech's football team next fall. He'll go under the knife as soon as school closes.

Lou Marvis, a truly great tackle while at Pitt, now engaged in business in Lock Haven, was a visitor in town Thursday. Great how we get around, isn't it?

Before the basketball coaches can legislate against alleged stalling, it would appear that they must define the act. A showdown is needed.

Did you know that the only guy who'd dare tackle George McLaren in practice when George was smashing things up as a fullback at Pitt was Red Morrow, and that Red took plenty of punishment from the powerful fullback?

Buddy Overend tried his hand at raising chickens once upon a time, and if you can get him to tell about it, you'll split all your ribs laughing.

Ide Carlson received a letter from Andy Hasting this week which was written and mailed from France in 1918.

Ralph Hogan, Tech's basketball coach, ran against Ray Conger during high school days and was able to give the new famous miler all the competition he wanted.

Nick Altrock Says:

COMING NORTH, April 5.—There is nothing new under the sun. Remember Achilles, the famous Greek that was invulnerable everywhere except his heel and then he went out and got bowled over on a banana skin or something? Well, it's like old times today. The Cubs looked all set for the 1930 pennant as soon as they bought Hack Wilson some smoked glasses, but they forgot Rogers Hornsby's sore heel. It's a tough break for the Cubs. With Hornsby out, there are plenty of heels in Chicago, but none of them can play second base.

Nick Altrock

Well, I see the hockey world series all over, but I bet there'll still be ice in Boston by the time we play there next month.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: FRITZ BABEL SPENT 60 YEARS IN BED—Fritz Babel, an eccentric inhabitant of Munich, Bavaria, was obsessed with a mortal fear of fresh air. ENS PROVOKED AS BUCS LOSE IN TENTH

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

HOUSTON, Tex., April 5.—The lethargic play of the Pirates will have to come to an end today or Manager Jewel Ens is likely to read the riot act to some of his players. While it is true that a patched-up lineup lost yesterday's game to Houston in 10 innings, the Pirate boss was somewhat provoked, as he should have been. The game came to an end in the tenth when Fred Brickell failed to catch a line drive when the put-out would have ended the contest in favor of the Pittsburghers. The Buffaloes' victory carried a score of 6 to 5.

Brickell is suffering with a bad ankle, but the ball that closed yesterday's contest in the interest of Joe Schultz hustlers was in Fred's grip up near his head and was not a very hard chance, all things considered. Fred missed the drive and the tying and winning markers went over with two out.

The general play of the big leaguers lacked pepper, although there were bright spots in the game. Gus Suhr, who won the battle of the previous afternoon with two homers, came through with a two-out double in the tenth to give the Pirates the tally that should have decided the contest in CHICAGO, April 5.—(AP.)—Three teams from 'way down in Dixie and a flock of fighting cadets were still heads up and charging toward hardwood fame today, as the tussle for the national prep basketball championship swirled into its final stages.

Heading the procession as probable winners were the big Athens, Tex., Hornets, who have a big chance of establishing a prep basketball record by capturing the title for the second straight year. Blocking their path in the semi-finals were the surprising Cadets from St. John's Military Academy, of Delafield, Wis. Fighting for final position in the upper bracket were two fighting teams from Corinth, Ky., and Jena, La.

Athens galloped into the semi-final round last night with the same unstoppable play that has characterized its machine in the past two seasons of national tournament play, in which it has won nine straight games. The champions seemed to toy with the big five from Wheatland, Wyo. They piled up a 27-to-5 margin at the three-quarter mark and then loafed along and finished it with a 31-to-14 victory.

W. P. G. A. ANNUAL MEETING CARDED APRIL 28

SCAJBARRETTI ASSISTANT PRO AT PINE CREST

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

The anual meeting of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association will be held at the Keystone Athletic Club on Monday, April 28, according to George A. Ormiston of Oakmont, secretary of the Western Pennsylvania governing body.

Carl Scajbarretti

The nominating committee already has slated J. Bernd Rose, of the Allegheny Country Club, for the presidency, and Harmar D. Denny, Jr., of the Allegheny and Fox Chapel golf clubs, as vice-president. Rose will succeed John Graham, of South Hills, and Denny will take Rose's chair. George A. Ormiston, secretary, and James A. Barber, of Chartiers Heights, treasurer, will be re-elected.

SCAJBARRETTI SIGNS

Carl Scajbarretti, of Duquesne, who won fourth prize in the William Randolph Hearst junior golf tournament at the Schenley Park municipal links last year, will be assistant professional at the Pine Crest Country Club this year, he says.

Before his new affiliation, Carl was a bellhop in the Hotel Schenley. He expects to play in all of the tournaments in which he is eligible this season.

It is understood that the Fox Chapel Golf Club will tear down its present clubhouse and build another and more beautiful one in the near future. The present clubhouse is scheduled to be torn down in about three weeks, it is reported.

The Fox Chapel links are in splendid condition, and a big season is anticipated, notwithstanding the clubhouse change.

ELDRED RETURNS

Vincent Eldred, professional at the Highland Country Club, arrived back home yesterday from the South, where he has been professional during the winter season at the Bracetown, Fla., Country Club, a beautiful 18-hole resort course. Eldred arrived back in our midst "tired, but ready to go."

Tee to Green

Jimmy Devlin is back on the job at the Nemacolin Country Club . . . and he's been kept busy lately, repainting his pro shop.

Walter Loeffler, professional at the South Hills Country Club, reports that the course there is in such splendid condition the regular greens may be opened next week.

The layout of the Stanton Heights Golf Club weathered the winter in great shape, according to Fred Harrod, the East End course's pro. The temporary greens may be abandoned altogether in about 10 days.

Davis Clarke, pro at Castle Shannon, says that members of that club are registering for one of the biggest seasons in history.

MOTORS PLAY SWITCHMEN

One soccer game will be played locally this afternoon. The Pierpoint Motors and the Union Switch and Signal will tangle at the Westinghouse High School field in an exhibition game. There has always been real rivalry between the clubs, and this is the cause of this session.

Tomorrow afternoon will find plenty of Pittsburgh's soccer fans traveling to Luna Park, Cleveland. The second, and what looms up as the deciding game, for the National open challenge cup, will be played. Fall River represents the East, and the Cleveland Bruell's the West. Fall River won the first game at the Polo Grounds, New York City last Sunday in easy fashion.

435 HORSES AT WHEELING

WHEELING, W. Va., April 5.—The J. G. Demarest stable arrived at the Wheeling Island Oval late last night, bringing in the same shipment the quartet of handicap horses of O. Viau. Demarest brought in his band of racers the two powerful entrants in the $5,000 Golden Jubilee stake, By-Product and Flying Ambassador.

Demarest's By-Product likely will be the favorite in the Jubilee Derby April 26. This fleet daughter of Black Toney-Cassidy Pride, was a topsawyer at New Orleans. There are nine others in the Demarest shipments here. They are Flying Ambassador, Extreme, Aganpanthus, Edward Gray, Pheasant, Wood River, Bright Flag, Dearinez and the speedy 2-year-old Master Halligan. In all probability Extreme will go to the post in the inaugural, as it is a six-furlong dash for older horses.

Four hundred thirty-five horses are now quartered at the track.

A. A. U. Mat Tourney Reaches Semi-Final

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP.)—The National A. A. U. wrestling championships reached the semi-final round late last night with Oklahoma Agricultural College's National collegiate A. A. title-holders still heavily represented. The Oklahomans placed five of their team of nine in the semi-finals.

Heading the list was Earl McCready, giant entry in the unlimited class, who threw his only opponent in short order. Jack Van Bebber and Leroy McGurk survived the quarter-finals of competition in the 160-pound division; M. L. Coster in the 112-pound and Bobby Pearce in the 118.

Waynesburg Five Tourney Victor

WASHINGTON, Pa., April 5.—Three days of play in the annual tri-state amateur independent basketball tournament closed here last night. The Gentile Billiards, crack Waynesburg quintet, won the championship of the senior division by downing the Logan Lumbers, of New Kensington, 32 to 13. Doc Pohns, of Butler, won, 26 to 24, over the Lee Restaurants, of Charleroi, to win the intermediate crown.

The Five Ponies, of Uniontown, triumphed over the Dei Cas Construction team, of Charleroi, 22 to 11, to win the junior division title.

Erie Boxing Fans Donate $128 to Hatch Fund

ERIE, Pa., April 5.—Erie boxing fans last night donated $128.90 to the fund being raised for the widow of Bobby Hatch, Pittsburgh Negro boxer, who was said to have died last week as a result of a beating received in the ring.

The collection was taken up by firemen at the Auditorium last night just before the main bout between Freddie Fitzgerald and Joe Reno got under way.

MISS COLLETT, EDITH QUIER IN FINAL

PINEHURST, N. C., April 5.—(AP.)—The National champion, Glenna Collett, and a youthful Reading, Pa., star, Edith Quier, meet here today in the finals of the North and South golf tournament for women.

They battled their way to victory today over the hazardous number three course of the Pinehurst Country Club, Miss Collett giving Maureen Orcutt, New York, a 3 and 2 drubbing and Miss Quier handing Helen Hicks, of Hewlett, L. I., a 2 and 1 defeat.

Miss Collett's victory was not unexpected, but general surprise was expressed at the way Miss Quier staged a comeback after a bad start to down her opponent, who holds the Canadian title.

Pittsburgh results in yesterday's play were as follows:

Championship Consolation—Betty Abernathy, lost to Mrs. Arthur Harrison, Lockport, N. Y., 3 and 1.

Fourth Consolation—Mrs. G. A. Magoon, lost to Mrs. E. F. Merwin, Stockbridge, Mass., 3 and 4.

ANDRUCCI TOPS GOLDSTEIN AT MOOSE

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

The man he couldn't beat in three starts in the amateur ranks bowed to Andy Andrucci, Italian lightweight boxer, of the East End, in the 10-round windup at the Moose Temple last night. The victim was Phil Goldstein, veteran, of the Hill, who was making his debut under the new management of Jimmy Dunn, of Cleveland.

Andrucci's victory was all the more notable because of the fact that he suffered a bad cut on his left eye in the fourth round and it bled so badly that the commission physician, Dr. M. R. Goldman, was called to examine it with the fight only half over. His seconds managed to stem the flow of blood between rounds, but it was a gory sight as Goldstein, rallying desperately in the final round, landed frequently on the wound.

For Phil it must be said that he showed the effects of a five months' layoff. Suntanned and seemingly stronger than before, he lacked both judgment of distance in his hitting and in avoiding punches and was an easy victim in the clinches, where Andrucci did most of his damage. Phil just simply didn't fight his fight. However, that is not saying that Andrucci, boxing cagily, could not have beaten him on a good night. They'll have to be rematched to prove that point either way.

VICTOR OUTWEIGHED

There were no real knockdowns. Phil opened the fight with a pip of a right to the jaw, which Andrucci shook off to hold his own in the round. He then carried the second round, was shaded in the third and also lost the fourth, in which he suffered his cut eye. From then on, he won every round until Goldstein rallied in the final session and Andy had to take to cover to protect his eye.

Goldstein weighed 136½ pounds and Andrucci 133¼ at 3 p. m. The ordeal of taking off more than 10 pounds of excess weight in a week for the fight may have had something to do with Goldstein's off-color showing.

Tommy Ward, of the South Side, again outboxed Dominick Profio, of Cecil, in the six-round semi-final, but the bout was called a draw when Profio finished strong to carry the last two rounds after losing the first four. Judge Brown voted for Ward and Judge Ferris and the referee for a draw. Both boxers scaled 144½ pounds. Manager Mason, for Profio, announced after the bout that Dominick would take a layoff of several months before he boxes again.

PERRY MAKES A HIT

Jimmy Perry, of Alliance, O., 129½ pounds, made a hit with the crowd through his rugged fighting and good punching in beating Mickey Hart, of New Kensington, 129¼, in the second bout, and Roy Ryan, of Detroit, 128½, defeated Al Farone, 127½, in the opener.

Al Grayber refereed all of the bouts and Frank Brown and Frank Ferris judged them, while Max Zeugschmidt was the timer and Red Robinson the knockdown timer. Bill Schuster did the announcing.

Young Saylor and Mickey Solomen will box the main bout in the Moose ring next Friday night.

Between Rounds

Jackie Rodgers will wind up his training at St. Peter's gym today for his 10-round main bout with Archie Bell, of New York, in the Motor Square ring Monday night, while Bell will arrive on the scene today. Rodgers boxed with Sammy Fuzo and big Kid Chisholm yesterday and his game ankle did not appear to hamper him.

The next boxing show at Junction Park, New Brighton, will be staged on the night of Monday, April 28, and will be the last of the indoor season there.

Tiger Joe Randall will have to undergo an operation for his injured heel. It likely will be performed next week.

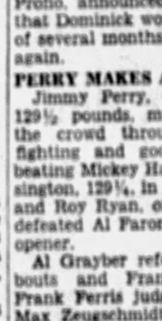
PUTTING THE SHOT

Brix, the University of Washington giant, now representing the Los Angeles Athletic Club, came east and won the National A. A. U. shot put. Incidentally, in so doing, he created a new world record of 51 feet 2½ inches.



Knute Rockne.

Very hefty, these Pacific Coast lads, when it comes to throwing the weight. Strange, that just a week previously, Brix was beaten by Rothert, of Stanford, who heaved the shot just short of Kuck's world record of 52 feet and a fraction of an inch. Krenz, of Stanford, was third in this unusual competition, with a heave of 51 feet. Imagine 51 feet getting only third place in a dual meet. But, then, all of the college students are much larger on the Pacific Coast. In fact, Capt. Biff Jones of the Army, claims that the reason Stanford has no crew is that the school has no students small enough to be coxswain.

not getting a free cut? I checked these things off, one by one, and I usually hit upon what was wrong, so that I could correct it next day."

THOUGH the Ohio courts denied his petition for a divorce, the conclusion of the suit means that Burleigh Grimes is at least free to leave his home district and turn his attention to baseball again.

The general surmise is that it will be a matter of only a very short time until Grimes signs a Pittsburgh contract and joins the Pirates. He is said to be in pretty good shape as the result of his independent training course at Hot Springs, and probably he won't be far behind the other Bucs in the matter of condition when the season opens.

Clarence Overend

NO DEFINITE decision has yet been reached at Carnegie Tech on the proposal to add boxing to the institution's sports and to put a team in the intercollegiate field next winter. At the meeting called by Graduate Manager Clarence Overend, 27 students reported themselves ready to come out for the proposed varsity team and a number of others who could not attend notified the management that they could be counted upon as candidates. However, a possible drawback is seen in the fact that nearly all of those responding represent the heavier classes and there is not a great amount of material in sight for the lighter divisions. Under the conditions, Manager Overend plans to put the entire matter up to the athletic council for a decision. Unless the officials can feel that a strong and evenly balanced team embracing all classes is assured, the idea of organizing a team will be abandoned.

THE match in which Jack (Kid) Berg retained the junior-welterweight championship by winning the decision over Joe Glick in New York last night was probably the first ever made that had a title riding on the result without anybody's being aware of the fact. Berg won the synthetic crown when he stopped Mushy Callahan in London on February 18, but he evidently forgot all about his new honors when he signed to meet Glick at 140 pounds, the class limit.

That a fight at that weight meant a fight for the title never occurred to the champion, the challenger or the promoters until their attention was called to it after the signing. As far as money percentages went it didn't make any difference, as the junior-welterweight championship is not recognized in New York state, and Berg therefore could not have claimed the usual privilege of 37½ per cent due to a champion there. The title might just as well be forgotten everywhere else, for all the attention that anybody pays to it.

The Lowdown On the Pirates

By The Benchwarmer

HOUSTON, Tex., April 5.—Well, folks, there's so many left-handers on this club Jewel says he will be daffy himself if he doesn't get rid of a couple of us. Look over that gang—there's Paul Waner, myself, Larry French, Jess Petty, Parson Lang, Lief Erickson and Roy Frazier. And Jewel thinks Fred Brickell and Comorosky ought to be southpaws, the way they act. Joe Devine is left-handed, too, but he's got a lot of right-handed ideas about him, Jewel says, especially when it comes to picking up ballplayers. Gee, I wish Joe had scouted me. I'd have a better chance of stickin' around all year.

The boss also says that Andy Bernar has more sense than all us southpaws put together. I guess Andy hits the hay every night around 9 and by the time the rest of us is up, Andy has his breakfast, walked a few miles and has his daily letter written home. The old arm is beginning to feel a little better and Jewel says he may throw me into a game or two while we are in Texas. I was afraid he was goin' to drop me at Tucson the day we played out there on the desert. Talk about wild and windy, Jewel says it put him in mind of us left-handers.

A lot of us rookies was sporting new shirts and neckties when we left Los Angeles. You see, the club gives us three dollars and six bits to eat on every day when we play exhibition games. Well, we was two weeks around Frisco and L. A. and had about 50 smackers for cakes. If a fellow is careful he can eat on half of this. I saved enough to pick off half a dozen 98-cent ties that was marked down from one-twenty-five. But a fellow don't want to punish his stomach or the old average'll drop. I heard one of the bushers tell another that while the team is in Texas he expects to save enough out of the meal money to buy the wife a new hat and a percolator. Guess, he's gonna stay on hot dogs and coffee for the week.

Some of the boys have nicknamed me Jake, and I thought it was a compliment for a long time because Chick Fraser told me I reminded them of ol' Jake Beckley, the first-sacker. But I gets wised up the other day and am still pretty sore. You see, Comorosky and Brickell both left Los Angeles with bad legs and they sat in the grandstand at Tucson to watch the game. Well, every one of the players yells up in the stand "Hello, Jake." I didn't get it for a while, but finally Commy told me that the gang meant they was "jaking" it, or pulling the Old Jake Stahl to get out of the game. Then I began to figure that maybe that was the reason they was callin' me Jake. That's going too far when I really have a sore arm and it looks like I may take a sock at one of them even if I get chased to some bush league for it.

It's kinda tough on us young fellas at this time of the year. Most of us didn't work all winter and all we get for training is our chow, bed and laundry. Two or three of the kids has written home for more jack but I haven't—yet. I'll try to pick up a couple of berries in the five-and-ten game and may be able to go along O. K. until I get a pay. Here's hopin'.

GRANDE BEATEN IN FRANKLIN BATTLE

FRANKLIN, Pa., April 5.—(AP.)—Howard Mayberry, Donora, won a 10-round decision here last night from Frisco Grande, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Allen (Tarzan) Beatty, McKeesport, won the verdict over Benny Burns, Akron, in eight rounds.

Tommy Heilman, Monessen, won from Special Delivery John Brown, Pittsburgh, in six. Lucky Strike Campbell, Franklin, knocked out Leon Magee in the first round

FITZGERALD GETS DRAW

ERIE, Pa., April 5.—Freddie Fitzgerald, Cleveland welterweight, was robbed of a well-earned decision over Joe Reno, Trenton, N. J., in the 10-round main bout here last night when Referee Leo Finneran called the affair a draw after the judges had disagreed.

Fitzgerald's clever boxing, his superior ring generalship and his ability to land the harder and cleaner blows gave him a decisive margin.

Ray Collins, Erie, won on a foul from Jimmy Reed, also of Erie, in the fifth round of a scheduled 10-round semi-final. Reed was leading easily at the time of the foul, when he delivered a blow far below the belt.

Frankie Bojorski, Erie, administered an artistic lacing to Eddie Flick, Oil City, in a six-round preliminary, while Jack Simpson, Ashtabula welter, beat Mike Antolik, Girard, Pa., in a four-rounder, and Joe Boler, Erie, and Eddie Robinson, Meadville, fought a four-round draw in the opener

BERG BEATS GLICK

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP.)—Jackie (Kid) Berg, of England, belted out a 10-round decision last night over Joe Glick, of Williamsburg, amid a storm of low blows that all but incapacitated him and twice floored him for counts in the eighth round. Berg, one of Champion Sammy Mandell's most persistent lightweight challengers, weighed 139¼. Glick 137½.

The crowd of 11,000 in the big battle of Madison Square Garden was stirred to alternate spasms of rage and joy by Glick's low smashes to the body and Berg's bitter battling to offset the fouls. When Joe Humphries announced that Berg had won unanimous verdict of the judges and referee, he received a great ovation, whereas Glick was heartily booed.

In a 10-round semi-final, staged after the main bout, Vincent Dundee, of the Baltimore Dundees, defeated Ben Jeby, New York youngster, in a hard, close match. There were no knockdowns. Dundee weighed 156, Jeby 157½.

LA BARBA BEATS PAUL

BUFFALO, April 5.—(AP.)—Fidel La Barba, Los Angeles featherweight, won the judges' decision over Tommy Paul, Buffalo, in 10 fast rounds here last night. It was Paul's first venture beyond the six-round limit.

FRED BARONI.
Stanton Heights Golf Club

Handsome Fred Baroni is what they call the good-looking professional at the Stanton Heights Golf Club, in East Liberty. But it isn't appearance that makes the golfer, and Fred boasts of so much skill and knowledge of golf that it far overshadows his facinating black hair and attractive brown eyes. He was born in North Carolina, back in 1900, but paid little attention to the links game until he came to the Pittsburgh district. He first worked under Macdonald Smith, at the Oakmont Country Club, in 1914, spent three and a half years with the late Charley Rowe at Oakmont, was affiliated with Montour Heights for six years and instructed at the Chartiers Heights Country Club for two years. He was with the Conneaut Country Club for a year before becoming associated with Stanton Heights, where he is in his second season. Baroni copped the West Penn Open championship three out of five years when he annexed that crown in 1922, 1925 and 1926. He has tried for qualify for the National open championship seven times, and last year failed for the first time to get in the field. In 1927, during the National open at Oakmont, he finished tenth. Baroni is one of the most deliberate players in the district, being noted for his exceptionally slow back swing, which gives him a long, true ball. — VERN SWARTSFIGER.

WARREN TEAM ROLLS 2,766 IN A.B.C.

CLEVELAND, April 5.—More prize money is due to go into the Pittsburgh district as a result of the 2,766 rolled yesterday by the Halsey Taylor team of Warren, O., in the A. B. C. tourney here. None of the several other Warren teams qualified.

GOES INTO SECOND

Harry Reed, of Rochester, N. Y., provided the thrill when he touched off a 748 series to place second in the singles event. He had games of 243, 257 and 248.

Two other events' saw leader changes also. Ninth in the doubles was assumed by B. Ross and L. Meyer, of Milwaukee, they getting a 1,290, while Jim Bodis, of Cleveland, shot sixth in the all events, his nine game total being 1,931.

Cleveland, because a young army of its best bowlers were in action, made heavy inroads on the $100,000 prize fund in both events.

Aside from the heavy firing of Reed, there was a 693 by Joe Bodis, a 686 by L. Meyer, of Milwaukee, a 684 by G. Buffet, of Detroit, and a 668 by F. Lange, of Cleveland, for outstanding marks.

RABBIT LIKES ROBINS

MACON, Ga., April 5.—(AP.)—Rabbit Maranville, the hardy perennial, thinks well of the team Wilbert Robinson has put together to represent Brooklyn this year.

"If they get any pitching, and I think they will," the Rabbit exclaimed, "they ought to run one-two and certainly no worse than third. I expect them to beat out the Giants."

Robinson himself may not be so optimistic, but he does think the Robins will do much better than they did in 1929.

STEPHENSON SETS GOAL

LOS ANGELES, April 5.—(AP.)—A home run a day seems to be the aim of Riggs Stephenson, the Chicago Cubs' left fielder. Along with other assorted hits, Stevie has made a circuit drive in each of the Cubs' last four victories over the Los Angeles Angels.

PITCHERS HIT STRIDE

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 5.—(AP.)—The front line pitching staff of the Chicago White Sox is about ready for serious business. All three of the aces, Ted Lyons, Al Thomas and Red Faber, have gone the route and all have turned in creditable performances. The elderly Mr. Faber's work yesterday against Little Rock was even more than creditable, the traveners getting only five hits, four of which smuffed in the first two innings. The Sox won, 5 to 2.

their honor. Stuart Clarke scored on the wallop.

The third game of the series, scheduled for this afternoon, will bring together a couple of veteran southpaws. Jess Petty is Manager Ens' selection, while Schultz will call upon Arthur Reinhart, who once wore the regalia of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Lloyd Waner was in uniform yesterday, the sick centerfielder being somewhat improved. There is nothing definite as to his condition, however. Dick Bartell thinks he will be ready to go to the short field tomorrow or the following day.

The Pirate camp today was glad to hear favorable reports from Pittsburgh concerning Capt. Pie Traynor. The stock of the team will rise provided the star thirdsacker is able to be at his post in the opening game with the Reds, one week from Tuesday.

Remy Kremer and Steve Swetonic pitched the long game against the Buffaloes yesterday. A youngster named Floyd Rose was very impressive against the Pirates through most of the game, he being relieved by Carlyle Littlejohn in the ninth.

Gus Felix and Tony Kaufman, two former major leaguers, were on the runways with two out in the tenth, and the Pirates had a one-run lead, when Outfielder Frank Hall blasted the ball to center. Brickell received the drive, but he let the rocket handcuff him, and the two big counters streaked across the plate while a small crowd yelled in glee

Y. M. C. A. Floor Champ Dethroned

CHICAGO, April 5.—(AP.)—Possibility of an all-New Jersey final in the international Y. M. C. A. basketball championship tournament was in the offing today, with Rahway and Montclair qualified in different semi-final brackets.

Rahway was paired with Vincennes, Ind., for 2 p. m. today, following its 31-to-25 victory over St. Paul, Minn., last night. Vincennes reached the semi-final by outlasting the defending champion, Buffalo, N. Y., for a 28-to-26 victory.

Montclair gained the penultimate round by an easy 24-to-12 triumph over Oak Park Branch, of Chicago, and was matched with the powerful Kansas City five, which eliminated Lincoln, Neb., last night, 33 to 19.

Pa. Won't Recognize Jack-Max Winner

PHILADELPHIA, April 5.—(AP.)—Frank Wiener, chairman of the State Athletic Commission, announced last night that the commission would not recognize the winner of the Sharkey-Schmeling fight in New York, June 12, as the world heavyweight champion. Wiener said he and other commissioners would insist that George Godfrey, Negro boxer, be given a chance to win the title before it is conferred on anyone.

The New York boxing commissioners announced some time ago that the winner of the Sharkey-Schmeling bout would be recognized in that state as champion.

Hornsby Is on Way East for Treatment

LOS ANGELES, April 5.—(AP.)—Rogers Hornsby, who has been out of the Chicago lineup for several days with a sore heel, left last night for Chicago, to have his foot cared for by a specialist. He denied, however, that the condition was serious, and said he probably would meet the club at Kansas City. He will arrive at Chicago Monday morning.

Lester Bell, whose arm has been lame, returned to third base, and Clarence Blair, chief utility infielder, was moved from third to Hornsby's station at second base.

STOGIES SELL ZAPANCIC

WILLIAMPORT, Pa., April 5.—(AP.)—Williamsport Baseball Club, of the New York-Pennsylvania League, last night announced from Salisbury, Md., the team's spring training camp, the purchase of Third Baseman Eddie Zapancic from the Wheeling Club of the Middle Atlantic League.

Fine Pictures for Framing

You have lots of time to read on Sunday. That's why you'll enjoy the marvelous Color Gravure section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph—pictures really suitable for framing. Tomorrow there is a full page reproduction in color of "The Connoisseur" by A. D. McCormick, an English painter of note. The original is in the Wendorfy Brothers' galleries. Then there is "Sunset" by Carl A. Falte, which will capture the attention of the lovers of art. Two new foreign poster designs stand out in lively coloring.

Sport Vignettes

If any further proof were needed that the dizzy playoff series that exists in the National Professional Hockey League is a farce it was furnished by the competition just closed in which Les Canadiens, of Montreal, won the championship by beating the Boston Bruins two straight games in the finals after the Bruins had outclassed all competition in the regular schedule, winning 38 games, losing only five and tieing one . . . Les Canadiens' record in the regular season was 21 victories, 14 defeats and nine ties. The Bruins had a winning streak of 14 games, and, when it was halted, began another one that ran up to 11 straight . . . The Bruins easily ran away with the title in the American group of the league, while Les Canadiens finished second in the Canadian group and nosed out Ottawa by only a single point for that berth . . . During the regular season, Boston defeated the Montreal team four straight games, scoring a total of 13 goals against 6 . . . If a schedule of 44 games isn't sufficient to determine a champion, then there is something wrong with the game . . . Certainly there is something wrong with a post-season series that enables a team that was lucky it didn't finish third in its division to take the measure on a two-of-three-game basis of the best team in the league . . . D. E. Benjamin, our sports photographer, is all wet this week-end . . . He covered two swimming assignments yesterday and has another one at the Carnegie interscholastic meet today . . . Maxie Rosenbloom, the Jewish light-heavyweight star, is reported broke again . . . He received $8,000 for his recent bout with Larry Johnson, but money doesn't stay with him long . . . One of his pet vices is rolling the cubes . . . He boxes Harry Fuller at Buffalo Monday night. Jimmy Slattery for the light-heavyweight title, also at Buffalo, April 21, and Johnson again in Madison Square Garden April 30 . . . A few weeks after he gets through with that schedule he probably will be flat again . . . That return bout with Johnson is a pip . . . It will be offering a Hebrew against a Negro in the windup of a show for the benefit of the Knights of Columbus . . . Arthur Bulow, Max Schmelling's German manager, will receive a 2 per cent "cut" of Herr Maxie's 25 per cent purse for his bout with Jack Sharkey for the heavyweight title in June . . . Figuring on a $1,000,000 gate that will amount to $5,000 . . . It will be his last share in Maxie's spoils, however, for their contract expires in October . . . Red Mason is sore because the new knockdown timers at the local fights are paid for wielding a hammer, and he has been doing the same thing all his life for nothing . . . Youngstown ought to be one of the best fight towns in the country these days because the mills are working in great style and there's plenty of money around, but there is no suitable place to hold big shows . . . Pretty soon it will be too warm to hold boxing shows indoors . . . And at about the same time the rainy season will set in and it will be too wet to hold them outdoors.—HARRY KECK.

BILL MUNDAY will be at the microphone in Chicago tonight to describe the final game of the National Basketball Interscholastic Tournament. This is the tournament in which the Homestead High School quintet made a nice showing a few years back. KDKA will have the broadcast at 10:30.

Two new features at KDKA will have many listeners. The Wonder Dog at 8:15 will be a discussion of "Rin Tin Tin" and a little playlet involving Rin-Tin-Tin, his owner, a retired banker and his daughter. The setting is a Western ranch and in the story the dog's cunning leads help to the young woman after a serious mishap. Bebe Daniels will be starred in the Del Monte premiere at 8:30.

A march composed by the mother of Dr. George M. Sutton, explorer, will be played by the Bethany College orchestra over KDKA at 11:30 in a program dedicated to Dr. Sutton, who is now on Southampton Island in the Arctic. Dr. Sutton is an alumnus of Bethany. Dr. Herbert Spencer Dickey, who is leading an expedition to explore the Orinoco River Valley in South America, will be remembered with messages from friends and scientific associates.

Ginger Rogers, David Mendoza and the Paramount Orchestra; Paul Ash and his stage show; Jesse Crawford, organist; Paul Small, tenor, and Harriet Lee, soprano, will entertain in the Paramount-Publix hour from WJAS at 10:30.

MOSCOW, April 5.—(AP.)—The All-Russian Medical Congress has decided henceforth in the Soviet Union to abolish Latin terminology or abbreviations in medical prescriptions as a "survival of the medieval ages."

The Russian language replace Latin in all branches of medicine.

Perryopolis, Fayette Co., Pa.

OF all the quaintly historic spots in Pennsylvania, within fifty miles of Pittsburgh, there is none more picturesque and replete with interest than Perryopolis, the plan of which is that of a hub and wheel—similar to that of Washington, D. C. It is said that this unique plan was created by George Washington, according to plans for the nation's capitol. At Perryopolis, the tourist will find the ruins of the "Washington Mill," built by Washington in or about 1775.

The Automobile Editor of the

has very recently made this trip and has carefully road-mapped it. This map is reproduced tomorrow, with a complete story covering all of the details of the tour. It is one of a series of "motorlogues" to appear every Sunday in the Sun-Telegraph, each covering a special tour of unusual interest.

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c, 60c.

Janina Expresses Views And Comforts Chickie

CHAPTER LII.

CHICKIE closed the gate softly and stood a moment fingering the buds of a pink climbing rose. There was a blazing at her throat. She must quiet it.

Going out with Jimmy—sitting next to him in the new car—laughing like old times—Jimmy thought she was an angel. His frank, boy's face danced when she said: "Oh—why, of course I'll go—"

Kind it is that the heart lies under the flesh and none may see its wounds. Chickie felt that she would push hers down and down; she would stamp it to death rather than Jimmy should see.

But as she was putting on her coat that evening she remembered suddenly Jimmy saying: "If I thought you were treating these fellows to any petting parties I'd be around here and knock their blocks off—"

Her skin burned scarlet; tears sprang to her eyes. She mumbled bitterly: "Oh, I suppose Jimmy never has! Very likely!" If any one else had said this to her a week ago she would have flashed against them hotly, the mere thought would have hurt so scathingly her young ideals. But now she wished passionately that Jimmy should be no better than the ninety-nine others.

Once, long ago, when she had been so captivated with Janina's pertness, she and Jimmy had conferred about this very thing. She wanted to know if it were true that only one in ten of all the men on earth were faithful. Jimmy had roared, reminding her, "There's always the tenth, you know."

She had said: "But who can be sure of finding the tenth?"

His eyes all black with excitement, he answered: "My girl, Chickie!" A little while after that he asked her to marry him—nearly four years—

But four years—a long time, and Jimmy earning $300 a month now and having this neat car for himself? Or perhaps he has changed in his thought as well—

Jimmy Teases

He kept teasing and chuckling saying with a grin: "Gee, this is good. Now look her over. Say—I might teach you to drive some night when you're lonesome."

He shot a quick, eager glance at her face. It turned crimson. When they were speeding along Dolores he said, with his teasing persistence: "Didn't like that, did you? But I see you have nights off now and then. Where's the Red-head these days?"

"In New Orleans—"

"And you don't want to cheat, do you? Even to take a ride in your brother's car? Engaged, Chickie?"

She answered flippantly: "Any old time and I so young and that capricious!"

"Keep that up, Chickie! When you're a sweet old maid, darling Jimmy is coming to pluck you off! You'll see!"

He kept teasing and chuckling at her and telling her openly all his bright prospects. How easy it was at home now, and gee—"mother got a kick out of the car—darn glad she didn't have to wait too long—"

Chickie sank back and let a friendly peace, warm with tears, steal through her. Why, she didn't need to worry. In a thousand years Jimmy would never dream this thing of her.

Abruptly he said, "Well, how's that Pole dame that used to dispense wisdom to the innocents? Still trying to open your eyes?"

Chickie gave a little edgy laugh: "Oh, indeed! A hard-boiled woman of the world like myself, Jimmy!"

"You!"

Chickie Surprises

But she plunged on recklessly, wanting suddenly to hear Jimmy's thoughts; aching that he might say: "Oh, well—times are different—what of a few things!" She said: "I thought Janina so crude then—now I know she merely told the truth."

"Oh—you do!" Black brows scowling. "Where did you learn all that, Chickie?"

"Don't be silly! As though a person can work four years and not see things—"

He drew a breath of relief: "Well—but look here, Chickie—those things you see are only a small part of the picture—"

Inwardly trembling, she interrupted with a faint: "But, Jimmy, so many girls don't seem to care. Perhaps it's not so terrible?"

He flung his fist down against her. No sound came from his tightened lips. Finally he said: "I didn't mean that, Chickie. You gave me such a start. You don't want to say a thing like that — humph — look here, Chickie, you don't know what you're talking about."

She laughed, turning her head sharply: "So darling Jimmy beats me up to enlighten me?"

He said: "Gee, you're pale—what's the matter? Did I frighten you?"

"You did!" And craftily, "Why did you grow so angry? Think sweet Chickie might have wicked wiles in her head?"

"Jealous, Chickie! I hate even that you know these things. Because they are terrible and the worst of it is that girls today are blinding themselves. They won't look at it square. They take a squint that only shows the present. You can't do that. That's the tragedy."

All along her skin went a little sickening quiver — hot — faint. She was afraid. Her voice kept on talking, growing merry. The weight in her swelled. She almost jumped with relief when Jimmy said: "I suppose you want to go home now? Look tired, Chickie!"

Working hard, Jimmy love."

"Some day you won't! Laugh! I'll show you. I've made up my mind for it. So there!"

When she went into the room she didn't switch the lights. She knelt at her window, leaning against the ledge. The sweet peas made her faint with their perfume.

Janina's Views

And she began to imagine that all the world would know what she had done. They would see it in her eyes. They would think it frightful, as Jimmy did.

But was it—when you love? When you couldn't seem to help it? When it rose up, restless, and swept you into the dark—swept you clear from your thoughts—

Oh—let him hurry up and come back — let him put his arms about her—she could rest! They loved — they had the right!

Yet the desire to hear some one say this to tell her: "You did right!" Don't be a fool! How can a thing be frightful now and be sacred a few months from now? Look at it coldly!" This desire took feverish possession of her.

Saturday she went to tea with Janina. She had her opportunity.

At the table next to them were a dozen children, the oldest girl, at most, 14, the others 10 and 12. The table was brilliant with flowers; the guests in their radiant youngness like smart, winsome dolls. Janina bowed to a sunny-haired, slender mite. She shrugged to Chickie.

"Five or six years from now when their gentle mothers are tearing their hair because the baby flappers are rushing to ruin I'm going to yell: 'Well, who started them!' Making them bored little prigs with the pleasures of 20 at 10. Sure they'll empty the cup at 20! You gave it to them for a sip before they were out of rompers!"

Chickie laughed: "But Janina, you believe in emptying the cup."

"I don't deny it do I? I don't sit back in complacent staleness and whimper because the world's gone to smash. They do and they start it. As for me, I like the wreck. I can swim."

"You mean you can talk, Janina. If you really did the things you say, you'd be crushed by them."

Comforts Chickie

"Chase yourself! Do I look flat? Or feel flat?"

"Because you only talk."

"I thank you, baby, for the sweet commendation. Rule me out, then. Does our friend Amy Heaton have a pale and tortured look?"

"Well — who really knows about her—"

"Oh, nobody! Diamonds grow on hedges! She carries a valise on Saturday mornings just to keep her hands busy. She takes the two o'clock boat for Mill Valley every week-end just to hike! In high heels and $5 hose!

And she lives in an apartment alone—that is sometimes—that costs $85 a month; she has a different fur for every outfit; never wears a stocking that costs under $3.50. But she earns $125 a month. Tell me how, ole dear. I'm some crafty shopper myself. I couldn't make that grade—not on my own—"

"You don't think there's anything terrible in it?"

"You bore me to extinction with your hand-me-down platitudes! Why is it terrible for a woman and not worth noting in a man? Can you tell me that? No, pink and pure, you can't! I'll tell you—it's just that the minds of people are educated to accepting it in the Lords of Creation. They may stray as they will but, let us budge off the chalk-line, and they'll run the scarlet flash down our back!

"At least they used to, but times are changed. Look at the novels of the last century—look at poor Hester Prynne and Hetty Sorrel. But today we have 'Lillian,' 'Ann Veronica' and 'The Pretty Lady.' That shows it—all in the way you look at it. No worse for us than for a man. We've found it out!"

Chickie drank this as though it were a life draught. She wanted more of this drug. Put her spirit to sleep; hush its tormenting voice. Oh, why not? The world is free.

"SWEET AND LOW"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

1830

Sweet and low, sweet and low,
Wind of the western sea,
Low, low, breathe and blow,
Wind of the western sea!
Over the rolling water go,
Come from the dying moon and blow,
Blow him again to me;
While my little one, while my pretty one sleeps.

Sleep and rest, sleep and rest,
Father will come to thee soon;
Rest, rest on mother's breast,
Father will come to thee soon;
Father will come to his babe in the nest,
Silver sails all out of the west,
Under the silver moon;
Sleep, my little one, sleep my pretty one, sleep.

"Silver sails all out of the west!" "Blow him again to me!"

STIFF silver sails now, unmovable, like giant faery-dragonfly wings, sailing a true way across the moon. Silver sails against the moon, no longer earth-and-sea-bound. Right against the moon. A flying star.

Holding a little boy the other night in a darkened room, in his nightie against the window-pane, we hunted for the night-mail plane, two noses flattened, four eyes searching the sky. We had heard its high, thrilling roar. A little boy shouted to be hurried to the window. A wildly excited mamma snatched a little boy from his bed. The moon was high, the stars million-fold and glittering, scattered like thrown gems all over the whole of the heavens!

"Find the moving star! The star that moves!" cried a little boy.

And there it was flying swiftly, a traveling star of light. Against the moon it showed, for a moment a silver sheen of wings, and then fled swiftly on, among the other stars.

There was a man in it we knew, sailing the sea of the sky, carrying the mail. A sailor carrying his ship across the moon to port on earth. A little boy decided that he had a little boy at home, in some window, and that his mamma was a sailor's wife, watching for "silver out of the west across a silver moon."

Does the mail pilot guess the thrill he gives a little boy and his mother every night, who wonder about him, who listen for his ship in fog, and wind, and rain, and moonlight, who cry "goodnight" and wish safe voyage home to him from the dark earth just forty-five minutes from Broadway?

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

'Airing-Out' Disease

OUR grandmothers were wise in their day and generation. They may not have known the scientific reasons for doing many things, but they used good common sense in the making of a home and protecting the family health.

DR. COPELAND

How many there are today who overlook the importance of having the bedrooms of the house exposed to the sunshine. For those who live in the city this is not always possible, but for those who are building a home this should be one of the first things to be thought of in its planning.

We know now, from a scientific standpoint, the real value of sunlight. But without knowing just why, the earliest Greeks worshiped it and provided for living in it at all times.

Perhaps the most important thing in the life of man, along with proper food, is good, restful sleep. When you have adequate sleep you are building up vital energy and resistance to disease.

You cannot have the right sort of sleep if you haven't a comfortable bed. When your mattress sags in the middle, your bedsprings begin to give out, and your pillows, too, are the worse for wear, it is about time to do something about it.

Put the money you might spend on some luxury into the very necessary adjuncts of your sleeping quarters. Mattresses should be made over comparatively often. Sometimes a new one will cost less than having one made over, but for sanitary reasons, if no other, your mattresses should be taken in hand at regular intervals. Sound sleep is conducive to good health. You cannot sleep well without the comfort of good beds and warm enough coverings.

Our grandmothers knew the value of sunlight and fresh air. They always used to hang the bedding out-of-doors in the sun "to air." Sun has the power to kill germs of tuberculosis, of pneumonia and many other diseases.

Cleanliness is the finest disinfectant known. Disease cannot resist cleanliness, fresh air and sunshine. It is a good thing today that housecleaning is a thing of weekly occurrence, rather than a "spring cleaning," as it was in grandmother's day. One should not overlook the fact that the bed and springs should be washed thoroughly occasionally with good soap and water so as to remove dirt and dust.

Give the mattress a good dusting and shaking out in the sun along with all the other bedding, if it is a possible thing.

Germs are everywhere present. They thrive on dust and dirt.

Florence Nightingale, that wonderful nurse of the Crimean War, said to her nurses: "You cannot lock-in or lock-out the infectious poison; you cannot wall out infection. You can air it out, diffuse it and clean it away . . . . Cleanliness and fresh air do not so much give life as they are life itself to the patient. Cleanliness—clean air, clean water, clean surroundings and a fresh atmosphere everywhere—are the true safeguards against infection."

No trouble it too great to expend on having a sleeping room that gives perfect comfort. Have sunshine if possible, make every effort to have it, for you are adding years to life for yourself and for the various members of your family.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

A STRONG solution of salt water is effective for doing away with unpleasant odor in the armpits. It should be applied and allowed to dry on, then soap and water should be used followed by a rinsing with clear cold water. There are excellent proprietary articles that will do away with excessive perspiration; no harmful results ensue.

CUTICLE about fingernails and toenails is particularly subject to infection. Instruments that are used on them should be sterilized by boiling. When getting a manicure be sure to see that clean instruments are used. Many shops have small electric boilers on the tables, and sterilization goes on before the eyes of the customer. Grand idea!

Spring Moon-ings

SOME men's hearts wait for the first call of spring—but most of them set the alarm clock for fear they'll miss something.

Every time a man falls in love he imagines that he has discovered a brand-new emotion; but, alas, like the restaurant potage, it always turns out to be just the same old stock with a different flavoring.

Cutie: Any woman under 60 for whom a man happens to feel a temporary tenderness.

thrust upon them, and still others rush into these spring marriages, just for the love of adventure.

Stern parents and family sitting rooms may be considered a handicap to courtship, but the Lochinvar who has to steal his kisses usually comes back for more.

A man's love is not dead until he begins to think of his wife merely as the person who disturbs his morning beauty-sleep and his after-dinner reveries.

The average man's love-making is so mechanical—nay, automatic—these days, that if he should stop in the middle of a sentence any girl could probably finish it for him, between her yawns.

Half the women in the world are revolting against the indignity of being tied to the home and treated like "pampered pets"—and the other half are struggling to find some man who will "pamper" them.

The smaller a man's heart, the more little foolish love affairs he seems to be able to crowd into it.

Many a beautiful memory of romance has been ruined by a woman's attempt to cling to the reality, after the bloom was off.

Katie Gives Her Theory on Attempted Robbery

I HARDLY dared to breathe as I made the apparently casual suggestion of seeing Katie about luncheon to my mother-in-law. Would she see through the ruse I had concocted as the only means of keeping her away from my overwrought little maid, or would her eagerness to share my trip to The Larches blind her to everything else?

"Yes, you might as well see Katie," she said with a pretense of deliberation which could have deceived no one. "You're already dressed for a drive, but I shall have to change. But remember to be firm with her. She's just pining for a chance to get weepy over this. I really ought to see her myself."

"It would be better," I agreed hastily, "but I do so want to get over to the agent as quickly as possible. That's such a splendid idea of yours about The Larches. I'm so afraid somebody else might want to lease it for the holidays."

"Yes, I've heard that the agents out here are bothered to death with people wanting to rent country houses at Christmas time," she said, and I laughed dutifully, even as I defended my theory.

"They ought to be," I said stoutly. "Anyone who can get to the country at Christmas time and doesn't."

I left the sentence unfinished and hurried out of the room.

There was a noise of clattering pots and pans from the kitchen, sure sign of Katie's state of mind, for, though she is rough and noisy, she works usually with silent efficiency.

"Oh, Missis Graham, my Missis Graham, I so glad you coom. You not belief bad tings about your Katie. You know vot dey say, dose beeg boonches of soup greens mit parsley left oudt? Dey say dot me und Jeem, me—und—Jeem—"

"Stop this at once," I said sternly. "Here I need you to help me to find out about this, as you did about Miss Mary's bank account, and all you can do is to weep over some utter nonsense spoken by those police officers because they didn't know what else to say. Is this what you learned in your detective correspondence course?"

I was quite proud of my control over my risibles as I made this little speech, which I was quite sure would banish my little maid's hysteria more quickly than anything else I could say or do. Katie's experiments in trying to live the melodramatic movie stories in which she revels have long been a source of mirth for all of us, and her latest venture, that of taking a correspondence course, which gravely rewarded her with an ornate diploma pronouncing her a "real detectative," in her own parlance, has been especially laughable.

The success of my experiment was so sudden that it startled me, used as I am to the vagaries of my tempestuous little maid. The sobs died in her throat as if by magic, her eyes gleamed eager anticipation through the tears, which she rapidly blinked away, and as I took my hand from the lips I had forcibly closed, a happy torrent of words rushed out of them.

"I know, I beeg fool pay attention to dose poor feesh, but dey get my goat someting fierce. Now I shoost brush dem avay like mosquitoes," Katie's gesture was superbly insolent. "But cef you vant to know vot I tink of last night I tell you now."

She paused and drew herself up dramatically. Well, our Katie knows the value of suspense.

"I tink," she said, measuring her words, "dot dose burglars vant find oudt who Marion really ees, who her real fader und moder."

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Gifts From Groom's Family

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it proper for a young man's parents to give engagement presents to the girl to whom he is engaged, and, if so, what?

YES, it is good form for the parents of the family of a young man to give an engagement present to his fiancee; that indicates that they have a friendly and cordial relationship with her. The gift should be of a personal nature — that is, something for the bride herself, and not for the new home. If there are several members in the family they might send the bride-to-be a dressing set, having her monogram on every piece. Other appropriate gifts are a silver or gold fountain pen, a gold pencil, a traveling clock or a dresser clock, a set of her favorite books, monogrammed handkerchiefs, a vanity case, a piece of jewelry, a traveling bag or an evening bag.

The Usher's Attire

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you kindly inform me the correct attire for an usher at an afternoon wedding, which is to be held in a hotel?

USHER.

THE safest thing for the usher to do is to ask the bridegroom what kind of attire he is expected to wear. The bridegroom is one who plans what he and his attendants should wear, and each attendant carries out his instructions.

Horoscopes

Sunday, April 6

SUNDAY'S horoscope shows a rather conflicting state of affairs, with restless and peculiar conditions and stubborn obstacles, despite much liveliness and some benefits.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year of conflicting circumstances, with much high activity, some benefits, but many setbacks and annoyances. Those in employment are under special menace.

A child born on this day should be extremely lively and progressive, but may be called upon to surmount many tenacious obstacles and unforseen perils in its affairs.

Monday, April 7

MONDAY'S astrological chart holds portent of some singular or erratic personal experiences and some very lively adventures in general affairs. Only well-governed conduct, wise insight and precaution in all manner of activities may obviate anxieties and peculiar complications.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of peculiar experiences of a personal nature and of many business perils. But much depends on their own wisdom, discretion and good management of all the affairs.

A child born on this day may be exceedingly lively and adventuresome, given to personal indulgences and excesses, which may prove its undoing, unless it be wisely trained in youth.

Three young men stepped from an automobile and took the bag, stepping into their machine, which contained two young women, Mrs. Sheriden said.

Sophie Dalczal, of 5904 Beacon street, was robbed at Shady avenue and Bartlett street of $15 by a young boy who stepped from an automobile containing two men. A boy robbed Mrs. Anna Greco, of 5816 Pierce street, while she was walking in Ellsworth avenue, near Spahr street. The boy also left a large car in which two men were riding.

2 KILLED, PLANE CRASH QUIZ ON

GARDEN CITY, N. Y., April 5—(AP.)—Authorities today sought the cause of an accident in which T. Worden Hunter, president of the Bach Aircraft Corporation, of Van Nuys, Cal., and his pilot, R. W. McAllister, were killed when their airplane fell and burned.

They were returning yesterday from Bethany, Conn., and were maneuvering for a landing at Roosevelt Field, three-quarters of a mile from here, witnesses said, when the left wing of their three-motored Bach monoplane appeared to come loose and the plane dived about 300 feet nose-foremost with its motors roaring.

DENIES 'VOODOO' DOCTOR CHARGE

Declaring she loved her husband, Mrs. Eleanor Harris, Negro, of 413 Washington street, Versailles, branded today as untrue the statement of the "Rev." E. D. Davis, 34, of 632 Chauncey street, Negro voodoo doctor, in Morals Court that she had given him $118 to cause her mate's death by sorcery. She said he retracted the charge after the hearing.

Mrs. Harris said she gave Davis $118 on his representation that in return he would rise at 3 a. m., gaze into a crystal, project his soul into the astral and find her father, Goggins Fleming, missing for 25 years. This, she said, he failed to do.

Police court records show Davis returned the $118 to Mrs. Harris after the hearing, and that she declined to prosecute.

ASK TAX LEVY TO GET VOTE

Attorney J. J. McGrath will ask the courts to order the County Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes to assess about 500 residents of the Thirty-second Ward in order that they may pay taxes and vote at the coming primary.

McGrath explained that his clients moved into Overbrook Borough, now the Thirty-second Ward, after the borough assessor made last year's assessments.

They appeared recently before C. J. McBride, member of the county tax board and asked to be assessed. McBride declared he could not make assessments legally until late in the fall.

The citizens consulted McGrath who proposed a test case in court.

2 MEN JAILED IN CLUB RAIDS

Two men were at liberty on bonds today as a sequel to raids on two clubs on the North Side yesterday.

The Madison Square Club, on the second floor of 848 Concord street, netted the agents several gallons of whisky and two pints of gin, they said. In connection with the raid the agents reported arresting Joseph Lotz, 41.

The other place, known as the Allegheny Social Club, at 810 Concord street, was visited a short time later by the raiders who reported seizing 21 pints of whisky and three half barrels of beer. Conrad Stein, 47, found behind the bar, was arrested, according to the raiders.

Two dwellings, one in Hays and the other in Glassport, yielded the dry officers stills.

TWO MEN HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Edward Stefanowicz, 21, of 2812 Penn avenue, brother-in-law of Representative Luke Sullivan, was injured severely this morning when his automobile collided with the machine of John Hughes, 32, of 18 East Robinson street, at Penn avenue and Seventh street. Stefanowicz is in the Allegheny General Hospital, suffering deep lacerations of the face and head.

Hughes, although knocked unconscious in the collision, was not seriously hurt and was arrested on a reckless driving charge. His car was thrown onto the pavement by the force of the crash. A similar charge has been placed against Stefanowicz, said to be a poolroom proprietor of the Penn avenue district.

TALKS SLATED BY NEGRO Y

Talks on industry, education and economics will be made at meetings of discussion groups today in the Center avenue branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, where the second annual conference for older Negro boys is being held. The conference opened last night with addresses of welcome and response, and will close Sunday afternoon.

Charles E. Ford, of Harrisburg, state boys' work secretary; Henry K. Craft, executive secretary of the Center avenue branch, and R. Maurice Moss, executive secretary of the National Urban League of Pittsburgh, are listed to speak today. Joe Friday, an Ojibway Indian of Northwest Canada, is conducting the recreational part of the program.

CARVER HELD IN TRIPLE SLAYING

SEBRING, Fla., April 5.—(AP.)—Newly discovered evidence, described by officials as "incriminating" William Randolph Carver, former Philadelphia real estate man, was ready for presentation today to a special grand jury called to investigate the deaths of Carver's wife and 2-year-old son, and a Negro yard boy.

A warrant charging Carver with killing his wife and son with an ax, and with shooting to death Ben Whitehead, the yard boy, was sworn out yesterday and served on Carver, who is in jail.

'Old Glory,' Tree Fall as Woman Capitulates

ONAWA, Ia., April 5.—(AP.)—The Stars and Stripes was hauled down, a 50-year-old maple tree was condemned, and a kink was taken out of a new road because a woman changed her mind.

Mrs. Ida Reitan, in an effort to save the venerable tree, had the flag lashed to a topmost branch of the tree which road constructors were going to fell. She argued that to chop down the supports of the flag was to desecrate it.

As counsel for the construction company pored over legal decisions in an effort to find a way around the knotty problem, Mrs. Reitan struck the colors, capitulated.

32-Year Silence Balks Census Enumerator

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP.)—Even Uncle Sam's census enumerators will not or cannot change a mode of living that has been in vogue for 32 years. A Bronx head-counter can attest to that. Approaching a certain housewife he queried:

"Where was your husband born?"

"I think in Ireland."

"Will you ask him to make sure?"

"And that I will not, we haven't spoken for 32 years and not even for the census will I do it."

SPAIN BUDGET DEFICIT CUT

MADRID, April 5.—(AP.)—A note issued by Minister of Finance Arguelles estimated the deficit in the government budget for 1930 would be 197,225,502 pesetas (about $23,000,000), which is lower than at first believed.

Governmental expenditures and credits to be met will take, it is estimated, 4,110,283,943 pesetas (about $494,000,000).

The minister said the financial condition could be improved by rigid cutting of unnecessary expenditures. He added that on January 30 the Treasury had a balance of more than 320,000,000 pesetas, but after obligations were paid only 68,000,000 in silver remained for future debts.

MEXICANS FREE U. S. FLIER

MEXICALI, Lower California, Mexico, April 5.—(AP.)—Loren Mendell, Los Angeles aviator and former co-holder of the world's endurance flight record, who was arrested 20 miles south of here for alleged illegal entry, was released last night by officials at the Mexican Customs Office within 20 feet of the United States border.

Shortly before he was taken from the Mexicali jail, Mendell issued a statement denying that he had confessed he intended to smuggle Japanese into California.

DAILY TRUE STORY

Another Secret!

CORA STEPHENS had learned a great deal and experienced a great deal—during the five years she had been private secretary to Vance Weyland, stockbroker.

When Cora's father died her sister Norma was 12. Cora was 20. It was up to Cora to provide.

She rented two of the three sleeping rooms in the suburban cottage and, through friends, got the position in the city with Weyland.

She had been one of the four girls in the outer office, then and she thought she was mighty fortunate to get $20 a week.

Cora began to realize what her father had been up against. He had to provide for the two girls, run the house, keep up the mortgage, and all on his small salary as clerk in a coal office.

Even with the rent from the two rooms and her $20 a week she found it difficult to get along. She must keep Norma in school, keep her well dressed and meet the thousand and one bills that came continually.

Vance Weyland pretended that he was deeply interested in Cora's work.

Cora was pretty and believed herself to be sensible. She suffered more than anyone suspected because she had to dress so economically. Weyland took her into the little office off his own when his former secretary left him. He added five more a week to her wages and now and then took her out to luncheon.

"Look here, Cora," he said one afternoon, "why commute? Why not let me fix you up a nice little apartment in town?"

She shook her head.

"Now be sensible. Don't go getting on any high horse girlie—this generation is plenty wise—you know what I mean."

"Yes, I know what you mean—I'm not going to faint or call you names, Mr. Weyland, only I just can't do it."

"I've got a kid sister about 13 now—I've got to provide for her and well she needs me and she's not the age when I could take her into my confidence about—about what you suggest."

Cora's Undecided

"I'll send her to a swell private school."

"You will?"

"I sure will."

"Afraid I can't—I'll think it over, Mr. Weyland."

"Sure, you'll think it over—and you'll decide that it's the best thing you can do."

"And if I don't—you get another secretary?"

"Not at all—I'm not quite so crude as that, Cora."

"It—it isn't because I'm different. I know there is supposed to be a broader viewpoint on life and—the sort of life you mean, but there's Norma—she wouldn't understand, and I have to be father and mother to her."

"How about me—loving me a little?"

"I like you—I like your honesty—I suppose you're as good as the next man—I haven't been in love—and I don't think that furnished apartments will ever fit into my ideas of living."

Vance Weyland laughed at her and told himself that so long as she faced his proposition so coolly she was as good as won.

She might have been at that, because it was a struggle, and Norma's clothes cost more and more and she was counting pennies right along, only she met Hal White, who hoped to become a great financial editor some day. Just then he was a "leg man" for the financial editor of his paper.

And when Cora had met Hal half a dozen times she discovered that she loved him!

Now and then, Vance Weyland would say, "Been thinking that little thing over, Cora? I'm crazy about you—I'd see that you were well provided for, always."

"Cant be done—guess I'm old-fashioned, Mr. Weyland," Cora would say.

He told himself that he was a fool to bother. He should let her go or put her back in the outer office, and get a private secretary who was "reasonable." But somehow it seemed like a game to him—a game he must win. There was no reason why he couldn't make Cora see things his way.

Once in a while she would go out with Hal.

An Understanding

They had an understanding by this time.

"When I land the right paying job, Cora," Hal told her, "I'm going to steal you—if it isn't too late."

"I'll be easy to steal—for you, Hal—and I'll wait," Cora would always answer. She meant it. Vance Weyland didn't guess it, but, if he ever had a slight chance of making Cora "broad-minded" and installing her in a love-nest, that chance was gone.

Cora's sister, Norma, soon realized what her sister was doing for her. She took a commercial course in high school, and was graduated.

While Cora was pretty, her sister Norma was more than that, she was downwright beautiful, and thoroughly unspoiled.

Cora realized that Norma had to go to work. She dreaded it. Norma was so beautiful that she would meet great temptations in offices, or any place, for that matter.

Cora decided that it would be best to get her into Weyland's office, where she could have her under her eye.

She asked Vance Weyland to give her sister a chance at the first opening. He said that he would "see about it."

Norma came into the office one day to see Cora.

Norma was 17 then.

Vance Weyland came through the little office to go to his own and stared at the girl. Cora introduced Norma. Weyland was very nice to her. Within a week one of the girls in the outside office got through. Cora never knew, at least not at that time, that Weyland had found her another job and given her a present of money to make an opening for Norma.

Norma came to work.

From that time on Vance Weyland gave up all thoughts of ever making Cora "broad-minded." But if it were possible, and he had a hunch it would be easy, he intended to win the beautiful kid sister of his secretary.

Only, while Cora and Hal would have luncheon together, Vance Weyland made the most of those opportunities. He had his luncheon sent up and shared it with Norma.

Weyland Kisses Norma

"I'm wild about you, Babe," Vance told her, "but don't let's hurt your sister—she seems to believe that she has a claim on me. Of course she hasn't. Some day you and I will step out."

"It would be lovely, Mr. Weyland."

He kissed her. He had great experience along those lines. Norma was thrilled.

He wanted to make Norma a present, so he got two, one for Cora. Norma believed that Mr. Weyland was a mighty nice man square-shooting as could be. Cora had already told Hal White about Weyland and how she had turned him down.

"He's a fool, Cora—he ought to have seen that you weren't that sort," Hal declared.

"Most men try, don't they?"

"Not if they really love you—"

He kissed her.

"Hope your boss doesn't go broke, Cora—as for me, I'm going to take a big gamble. I'm sure right—I'll either make a fortune or have so much stock to deliver that I don't own that I'll have to jump the country."

Cora begged him not to be rash.

Weyland couldn't keep away from Norma. One day Cora said to him, "Please don't turn Norma's head, Mr. Weyland—she's just a child."

"Of course—and I treat her as a child—tough for so young a girl to have to work. Don't you worry, Cora."

Cora was disappointed. She guessed that Norma had fallen in love with him and she had hoped he would say something about wanting to marry her. She couldn't watch Norma every moment and when she talked to her Norma always said that it was just friendship.

Hal White had been right—there was a smash in the market. While so many were frantic, Hal seemed to be very cheerful. Vance Weyland was ruthless about his margins—he wasn't losing a thing, and selling out old customers right and left—hard as adamant to them when they went broke.

"I'm getting mine," he informed Cora.

Cora was too worried about Norma to think of anything else. Several times she had heard Norma talking in her sleep and murmuring "Vance" and "Always be good to me."

Norma Nervous

Norma seemed nervous and denied it when Cora asked her about it.

Poor Cora, the market panic didn't interest her. It was at its peak then, but she was in a bigger panic over Norma.

One morning Norma complained of a headache and said she couldn't go in to the office.

Cora caught an earlier train, and only the office boy was there when she arrived. She went straight to Norma's desk and rummaged. She found some memos, an address and other things that made her turn cold. Cora worked rapidly.

She left a note on Weyland's desk to the effect that she had to go to the dentist to have a tooth treated. Then she went uptown and stationed herself in a doorway across the street, telling the doorman she was waiting for a friend. Her worst fears were realized. In about an hour Norma arrived in a taxi, with two big suitcases and went into the apartment house opposite—the address Cora found in her desk.

Cora went back to the office. Vance Weyland was telephoning when she came in. He said: "See you at four," and hung up.

"Tooth's all right," said Cora, smiling at him. She went to the window. Hal White came in to get a word from Weyland and said to Cora—"All set, made my killing." Then he went out.

Cora stood at the open window looking down 15 stories into the street.

"Look, they're like madmen down there, Mr. Weyland, and there's some trouble there."

Cora gave him a mighty shove.

Then she screamed and screamed as the other employes rushed in. She pointed out of the window and collapsed.

The headlines over the newspaper articles about Vance Weyland's fall into the street nearly all were:

Chance to Help Others To Help Selves Comes

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week have been designated Gift Days of the Goodwill Industries. On these days the public will have opportunity to be charitable without being at any monetary expense. Clothing for women, children and men, for which the owners have no further use, is asked in behalf of those who will be able to make use of such garments.

Donors are asked to wrap such articles in bundles to be carried to school by their own youngsters. At schools Boy Scouts will take charge of the collections, which will be picked up by trucks and transported to the plant of the Goodwill Industries, Liberty avenue and Twenty-eighth street.

Such repairs as are necessary will be made by Goodwill employes, all of whom are under physical handicaps that prevent their employment elsewhere. They will then be sold at nominal cost at four Goodwill stores, the charge being just sufficient to pay the employes of the Goodwill Industries, operated for the purpose of giving unfortunate persons a chance to earn a living.

Don't forget a bundle Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday.

Conferees Will Get Chance To Expurgate Tariff Bill

Now that the House has sent the tariff bill to conference, ample opportunity will be offered the conferees to eliminate its most flagrant features.

Ample opportunity will be offered the conferees to reduce the extortionate increases in the sugar, cement, lumber and shingle schedules.

Ample opportunity will be offered the conferees to eliminate the unsound and unworkable export debenture scheme inserted by the Senate.

Ample opportunity will be offered the conferees to restore the flexible tariff provisions inserted by the House.

Ample opportunity will be offered the conferees to make a daily report to the public of what they do and leave undone to purge the worst tariff bill in history of its most indefensible features and send it to the White House in a form to warrant the President's approval.

But it will take more than ample opportunity to compel the conferees to discharge their obligations to the American people. Only the force of PUBLIC SENTIMENT can do that.

The Republican majority in the House defied public sentiment when it passed the Hawley bill. And the Republican majority in the Senate, aided and abetted by a few renegade Democrats, defied public sentiment when it passed the Grundy-Smoot bill through the Senate.

Now the conferees must choose between obeying the orders of those leaders in both Houses responsible for the extortions that abound in the Grundy-Smoot-Hawley bill or fulfilling the campaign pledges of the party in power.

It was the party in power, speaking through its nominee for President, which pledged the American people A LIMITED REVISION OF THE TARIFF FOR THE PURPOSE OF GIVING TO AGRICULTURE THE SAME MEASURE OF FAIR PROTECTION GIVEN TO INDUSTRY.

Instead of doing that, the party now in power has sent to conference a bill providing for a general revision of the tariff upward.

Should this bill become a law, either as it passed the House or passed the Senate, IT WOULD RAISE THE COST OF LIVING FOR EVERYONE, INCLUDING THE FARMER. It would not relieve the burden of the farmer, but add to it.

For the Grundy-Smoot-Hawley bill, as it has been sent to conference, is a bill to serve the special interests at the sacrifice of the public interest.

And unless the conferees purge the Grundy-Smoot-Hawley bill of its more flagrant extortions, then the American people have a right to demand its veto by the President.

Capone for Mayor

A Healthy Sign.

Al Capone was almost elected Mayor of Monticello, Iowa, this week. Al probably never heard of Monticello. Few others have, either. But the town put itself on the map when nearly half of its 175 voters cast their ballots for the Chicago racketeer.

Many pious persons will be shocked at the mere idea of any town wanting Capone for chief executive. But more will see in it a sure sign that conditions are fundamentally sound. America hasn't lost its sense of humor, and nothing can be very wrong with a country that keeps that.

We are a sad puzzle to foreigners, and no wonder. The daily crop of idiocies and stupidities that get into the papers is prima facie evidence that we are a nation of lunatics. But the fact is that most Americans find their Al Capones and other freaks of nature a perpetual source of amusement. Nine-tenths of our people spend their time snickering at the other tenth. Strangers from abroad fail to note that.

Back in 1861 the first Battle of Bull Run was fought, and the Northern army was licked to a frazzle. Washington was defenseless, the Union was tottering. Most nations in those circumstances would have been plunged in despair. But instead of gloom, a roar of amusement went up through North and South alike at the speed and agility with which the boys in blue ran away. The Union was saved then and there, though nobody knew it.

You can't worry much about a country that laughs at itself. It will outlast Rome. But when we begin to take ourselves seriously, look out.

The Magic Carpet

The Newsreel.

Few tales have stirred the imagination of the human race so much as the story of the magic carpet. The magic carpet of these days is the newsreel. Consider the strip of celluloid that the explorer Wilkins brought back with him from the Antarctic wastes.

He filmed an expanse of waste so icily bleak, so desolate that it can be described only in words from the most terrible passage of Dante. Since time began less than 500 beings have ever seen that last portion of the globe. Spectators of the Hearst-Metrotone newsreel at the Embassy Theater in New York City, are transported to it as on a magic carpet. Five million people throughout the land also will view it, with imaginations stirred and the same awe that stirred Wilkins as he propped the camera down there on the snow.

"Hands Across the Sea"

Drawn by Nelson Harding

Reaching out across the sea
Those hands exert a potent grip;
Their tugging at the coat tails means
It's time to end that futile trip.

The voice of Public Sentiment
Explains quite unmistakably
The meaning of that homeward pull
Of eager hands across the sea.

Isn't It So?

Nothing works more industriously than an idle rumor.

The chronic borrower discovers that it is possible for a man to be so close you can't touch him.

Ridicule is a keen weapon. You can hurt some people more by laughing at them than by shooting at them.

Occasionally you will find a man with a soft spot in his heart, but usually you will find such things in their heads.

'NO HELP NEEDED'

By Herbert Kaufman

THE first duty of Congress is to conserve opportunity and insure livelihood for the PRESENT people of America.

For the time being, there are several millions of our citizens and aliens who cannot procure work. And are more or less dependent upon their savings accounts or institutional assistance.

A considerable number of these displaced workers will not be economically readjusted until merchandise and agricultural surpluses are absorbed, and alternative human occupations provided for the groups whose former tasks have been inherited by automata.

President Green, of the Federation of Labor, proposes continuous, instead of SEASONAL, engagement as the panacea.

He considers it the SOCIAL DUTY of industry and business to keep their help on the payroll throughout the entire year.

MR. GREEN, of course, knows that the average of invested capital is barely sufficient to make both ends meet under the BEST of auspices and management.

His Utopian proposition is so OBVIOUSLY impractical that horse-sense and experience dismiss it at first glance.

Business must cut staffs and cloth according to its means and immediate prospective markets.

To saddle the support of UNNEEDED clerks and workmen upon private enterprise would impose bankrupting burdens upon overhead, and arbitrarily invest PRIVATE responsibility with the equivalent of a dole system.

PATERNALISM is not a ward of TRADE, but of GOVERNMENT.

All in all, too much significance is being attached to a TEMPORARY DERANGEMENT in the machinery of production, which must be periodically overhauled and redesigned to comply with the specifications of progress.

Consumption ALWAYS reaches for brakes when commerce exceeds the speed limit, THEN TIGHTENS loose bolts, refills the gas tank and resumes its interrupted journey to FRESH peaks.

A community can use just SO MUCH wheat, furniture, copper, steel, construction, fabrics, and leather per annum.

WHEN there's an excess of ANYTHING, satisfied appetite and larders cry halt, and proceed to digest sufficiencies.

The MOST that efficiency and wise administration may achieve, is an increase of fat years over lean and a wider promotion of thrifty practice to meet these emergencies as they episodically arise.

Meanwhile, we should cease pouring into OVER-FILLED buckets and suspend immigration until the slack in idleness is taken up and improved conditions make room for expansion of population which, at the moment, merely tends FURTHER to muddle the situation.

Every ship, emptying its steerage into Ellis Island, is dumping more candidates for breadlines, soup kitchens and inevitable vagrancy.

We've trouble enough as it is, without importing any ADDITIONAL dilemmas from Europe.

∴ LISTEN, WORLD ∴

By Elsie Robinson

"I THINK I'm going crazy with boredom," she writes. "I live on a stupid little street. We all know what everyone else is doing and it is deadly monotonous. Nothing new ever happens. If I could only get out and see some real life—"

I'm thinking of two answers to that letter, which I've seen lately. One is an exhibit in the New York Museum of Natural History. It is called—"rotifers and their associates." Sounds about as exciting as a hunk of excelsior, doesn't it? Actually it is thrilling and lovely beyond all description.

One looks through a circular glass pane, some five feet in diameter, into a brilliantly lighted mimic world. The "world" is a reproduction, in blown glass and wax, of one-half an inch of pond bottom, magnified a million times. To the dull human eye, a half-inch of pond bottom is an exceedingly uninteresting object. A scrap of ooze, some filaments of moss, some minute creatures squirming in the scum. But magnified—here is fairy land!

That scrap of ooze is a frail filagree of bronze, threaded with silver, set with plaques of gold. Those filaments become a ferny wood, with crystal stems and fronds of emerald lace . . . webbed thick with star-dust . . . roped with living pearls—

Strange pearls, with hearts of ruby and bright topaz blood. Hearts that desire, as you and I desire. Blood that runs hot with anger or clots thick with fear.

Creatures too small for our dull eyes to see . . . spending their lives in one-half-inch of ooze . . . yet touching all the heights and depths of life . . . war . . . romance . . . hunger . . . adventure . . . birth, mating and the brief, dark sleep of death.

That's one answer to the cry of a woman who can't find anything interesting in a little street. There's another—running in the Ambassador Theater in New York. It is called "STREET SCENE," and it represents a segment of another pond bottom—a block of New York tenement life.

A sordid, dready segment, yet here, as in the puddle, runs the hot red stuff of drama. Here's every dream that flits through human mind—love, lust, ambition, hate, gay, foolish laughter, pity, tenderness, rebellion, malice, murder. All in one "stupid street." A place where you and I might yawn away our lives. But Elmer Rice, seeing it with artist's eyes, wrote "Street Scene" and showed startled thousands a cross section of heaven and hell.

Bored?

There's the answer — in your own dense eye, not in the scene before you. That scene's athrob with drama, if you'll see it so.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

SOMETIMES it seems that kids think straighter than anybody else. We get used to thinking the way we have to think so as to make some dough, and the kids go right on thinking natural.

I don't know whether you get me or not, but it's like this, anyhow. A teacher says to a kindergarten class, "Now, there's sheepskin, for instance. Does anybody know what sheepskin is used for?"

And a kid by the name of Ethel pipes up, "I do!"

"All right, Ethel, what is sheepskin used for?"

"To keep the sheeps from falling apart," she says. And I don't think that was so very dumb.

Text For Today Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ.—Colos. ii:16, 17.

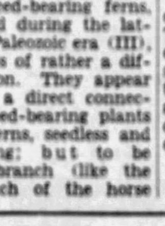
THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

IT HAD been suspected for a long time that these two extra bones, the so-called "hammer" and "anvil," correspond to the two bones which in a reptile make the hinge-joint of upper with lower jaw; for in a mammal embryo they are actually, before they are built into the machinery of the ear, nipped off from this very region of the developing jaws.

Now in the Theromorphs, the first steps in this process can actually be traced. In the earliest fossils, the arrangement is like that of other reptiles. But as we go forward in time, the two hinging bones of the jaws gradually release themselves from this duty, grow smaller and are to be found in the region of the ear.



H. G. Wells

From this condition, only a small step would be needed to convert them into ear-ossicles. Archaeopteryx had just raised itself to bird status; the Theromorphs were still reptiles, but were on the verge of climbing out into a higher stratum of biological society.

If we want an example of such a transition among the invertebrates, we can go to the brittle-stars. These Echinoderms are very like starfishes, but their central body or disc is much more sharply marked off from their wriggling arms.

In all living brittle-stars, the grooves along the lower surface of the arms, so prominent in starfishes with the tube-feet arranged along them, have disappeared below the surface, roofed over to form tunnels; further, the main skeleton of each arm is a chain of little ossicles, beautifully joined together.

But in the Silurian (III C) and Devonian (III D) periods there existed obvious brittle-stars which possessed open arm-grooves and arm-skeletons of much less elaborate construction; in both these ways they link the existing brittle-stars with the true starfishes. They were star fishes becoming brittle.

There are plant missing links as well as animal ones. The Pteridosperms, or seed-bearing ferns, which flourished during the latter half of the Paleozoic era (III), are linking types of rather a different description. They appear not to provide a direct connection between seed-bearing plants and the true ferns, seedless and spore-producing; but to be rather a side-branch (like the Hipparion branch of the horse stock), which, while progressive in respect of seed-evolution, remained primitive in its general fern-like form and growth.

But if the true link between ferns and seed plants must be sought in some type ancestral to both modern ferns and seed-ferns, none the less the seed-ferns decrease the gap.

Once more, examples could be multiplied; but these suffice, since all we are concerned with here is to show that missing links turn up in the most diverse groups of animals and plants, and from all periods of the earth's long history. Steadily the gaps are filled and the ramifications of the tree of life mapped out with ever increasing confidence and precision.

BOOK III.
Chapter III.
The Evidence From Plant and Animal Structure.
Sec. 1. Structural Plans, Visible and Invisible.

In the previous chapter we have reviewed the geological facts which constitute the direct evidence for evolution. They have shown us evolution as actually taking place among living things; they have demonstrated that it has needed enormous lapses of time for its operations; that it makes no convulsive steps; and that it operates to produce, not merely progressive change, but also divergence and variety.

But although this transformation made visible in the past history of life is by itself sufficient to establish the fact of evolution and to intimate something of its modus operandi, yet the indirect evidence must not be passed over.

For one thing, it is impressive to see how each line of evidence confirms the same story; and for another, the indirect evidence throws light upon many of the facts and methods of evolution which the direct evidence does not touch.

The first line of indirect evidence is comparative anatomy. This is often very similar to the direct evidence derived from fossil forms; in a number of cases the linking forms between groups are not wholly extinct, but a few of them linger on to the present day.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 5.—New York business organizations are adopting the "mess" to promote fraternalism among employes. The custom is in high favor among branch houses in the Orient and provides a sort of combination club room and living quarters for those who could only afford a single room.

The "mess" aims to be self supporting but makes no profit and is, of course, only for bachelors. A reading room, billiard hall and gymnasium as well as other equipments of the usual club are maintained and all must submit to a plan of regular living.

While there is no espionage, the members are honor bound to observe proprieties. Each member agrees to be home at midnight save upon especial occasions. Otherwise he is locked out and pays a fine. Gambling games and the use of intoxicants are tabooed.

With such a community plan, young men are able to live far more cheaply and in excellent surroundings. Once a month there is an hour of lecture on some topic of general interest and all are pledged to attend. At most of the lectures the value of thrift is stressed.

The mess houses are usually private homes. There are 14 on Riverside Drive and 7 on West End Avenue. In all there are 68 in the greater city. Their economic and social values are stressed by illuminating statistics gathered by investigators.

It has been shown that out of 1,000 employes, all but 208 had bank accounts and were systematic savers. More than 800 were total abstainers and in three years only 16 have been forced to give up their membership on account of flings at the flowing bowl.

Incidentally, there is a growing tendency toward "home work" among important executives these days. Some only go to offices for several hours a few times a week. This privacy relieves them of the annoying distractions of office routine.

* * *

Indeed an active magnate of a world-wide industrial organization has not visited his office in Rector street but twice in three years and says he has done his most constructive work during that period.

* * *

At a 14th street pier the other morning they were giving a French actor a farewell party and a jazz band, tactlessly I hope, tooted "Goodbye Forever."

* * *

Jack Buchanon, British actor, is considered one of London's best dressed dandies. His initials are reputed monogrammed in black on the wrist flaps of his white evening gloves. But what ho in monogramming is attained by a meticulous New Yorker who has a cut out monogram in the little end of four in hand ties.

* * *

Comedy honors of the season have been carried off by the wry-necked, baffled and hollow-eyed comedian Charles Butterworth. Following his appearance as a principal in a musical show, he has four offers of stage stardom, and several in the talkies. A London engagement also awaits. Butterworth's melancholy eyes seem to be always blinking and bewildered. He is a gloomy wraith at whom you chuckle but love.

* * *

Butterworth's best laugh provoker is when, apropos of nothing at all, his doleful expression lights up like a cathedral and he suddenly exclaims: "I guess I'll go eat an ear of sweet corn."

* * *

I wonder if others feel an urge to execute a rigadoon when the days begin to lengthen, or is it just one more symbol of senility?

A photo of this chronicler has been appearing in various publications for years and at the moment a likeness adorns some 5,000 lithograph ads posted about the metropolitan area. And yet this morning a stranger inquired if I happened to be Jimmie Durante and at what night club was I appearing now. I'm no Jack Gilbert, but I can make faces and beat that mug in a beauty contest.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

WHEN you go back to the old home town you don't hesitate to call on your former friends at their places of business.

You give no attention to the time you make them lose. In fact you are annoyed if they do not show you the courtesies you expect.

You would not think of encroaching upon the time of city friends in their business haunts.

It is true that in smaller places work is done with less speed.

But practically everyone in the small town has more than one line of work to perform and this requires in all more time, more hours than your job.

When you prevent your old business friend from doing his work for any considerable length of time he usually has to catch up by putting in extra hours of service.

Now while you think your friend in the rural districts should entertain you, what do you do when he calls on you in the big city?

After a few words of greeting you make it evident that you wish him to depart.

You are unwilling to give up any of your leisure to him because your city friends are now more attractive to you.

You would be following the Golden Rule more closely if you should give your rural friends a square deal.
